Salunga People Terror-Stricken

(From Page One)
Residents of Salunga feared that an earthquake had visited Lancaster county and many persons spent a sleepless night.
No clue as to the cause of the blast was forthcoming until the large hole in the Peifer field near the house was discovered. The hole indicated that a blast of some sort was set off there.
The state police at Manheim were called and they started a thorough investigation. Every resident in the vicinity was questioned. The first real clue came when they found an aged man who had amused himself that evening by keeping the numbers of automobiles he saw stealing into dark lanes in that vicinity.
In his collection was the number of a machine which he saw entering the Peifer lane some time before the explosion.
The state police found the driver of this car and the arrest of the four young men quickly followed.
They soon admitted causing the blast, saying that they had obtained a case of sixty-some sticks of dynamite and were curious to know what would happen if it were set off.
They obtained a time fuse and went to the Peifer farm and after putting the dynamite where they thought it would do no harm, attached the fuse which was timed to go off several minutes later, lighted it and sped off.
Several minutes later they received the surprise of their life, when still a short distance away, the blast caused their automobile to jump from one side of the road to the other.
They declared that they had no object in setting off the dynamite other than to see what would happen. They have agreed to make good all the damage that their experiment caused.
The arrests were made by Troop 60 of Barrick and Constable Rodgers, of Manheim.

THATCHED ROOFS STILL COMMON IN ENGLAND

One of the oldest crafts in England is that of thatching. In Norfolk county flat-bottomed boats still pass along the streams conveying men who cut and gather reeds for thatched roofs. When reed season is in full swing huge piles of dried reeds stand along the banks waiting for the thatchers. Thatching is really one of the manual arts hereditary in certain families in that country. One family has engaged in the occupation through four centuries.
Only one change has been made in the process during the 400 years. Formerly the reeds were fastened to rafters with long strands of bramble bush. Now either tarred twine or iron pegs are used for that purpose. As the reeds are being put on the roofs their tops are still laid in place with a historic implement known as the leggett. This implement consists of a block of wood with comb-like arrangements of horseshoe nails.
