MANY MORE TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES REQUIRED

Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania Reports Recent State Delivery 65,000 Greater Than Last Fall

Indicates Increasing Business Activity

According to figures recently compiled by the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, over 1,300,000 telephone directories were issued in the state during the spring and early summer. This is approximately 65,000 more copies than were distributed last fall.

This increase is a good indication of a healthy growth of general business, and telephone officials. They say that commercial and industrial concerns require additional telephone facilities when business is on the up grade. More new enterprises are also launched during a period of general prosperity. This all means additional telephones. More telephones in turn require more directories.

The compilation, printing and distribution of these books in Pennsylvania constitutes one of the biggest publishing jobs in the country. Approximately 1,500,000 listings are contained in the twenty-nine directories in use throughout the state. Some idea of the vast problem involved in the preparation of these books is obtained from the fact that about one-half of the total number of listings are changed in each issue. These changes are due to people moving from one location to another. Listings for new subscribers to telephone service must also be added. Almost 400 more pages were required in the last books to accommodate the additional listings. One hundred and seventy-two people in the telephone company work continuously on the preparation of directories.

The spring issue of the Philadelphia book was the largest single directory ever published in the history of the telephone company. Each book weighed 4 1/2 pounds. Three hundred men and boys, 150 pushcarts and a fleet of motor vehicles and wagons were required for the distribution. Eight tons of glue, 1100 tons of paper, 15 tons of ink and 8500 yards of cheesecloth were required for the printing of the 1800-page book. More than 480,000 copies of the book were distributed. About a half million listings were included.

The last Harrisburg directory presented a much different appearance from the Lancaster-York directory so that all three cities now use the same book. This is a great convenience to subscribers making out-of-town calls.

TEXAS ROOT ROT REDUCED BY TWO YEARS' CLEAN FALLOW

Of the many methods tried for the control of Texas root rot, a destructive disease of cotton, alfalfa, and numerous other crops in Texas and some of the irrigated valleys of the Southwest, allowing the land to lie idle with clean culture for two seasons promises to be the most practicable, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Investigations were started in 1907 and conducted at the department field stations in Texas and Arizona.

Cotton root rot is caused by a fungus living in the soil. It was considered that the disease might survive on the roots of grasses or other plants which it does not kill. This belief led to the clean fallow tests. Two years of clean fallow resulted in the production of a normal crop of cotton unmanifested at any point in the test plot, while some infestation still remained in the plot followed but one year. While these tests are favorable to clean fallow as a means of eradicating the manifestation, the method must be regarded as still in the experimental stage.

Tests made at Sacaton, Ariz., demonstrated that small isolated areas of Texas root-rot infestation could be controlled by saturating the infested soil with formaldehyde (1 to 100 solution). A small plot, on which 92 per cent of the cotton plants had died of root rot, was irrigated with this solution by means of a street-sprinkling tank and later by 2 acre-inches of irrigation water. The cottonseed was planted five days later. The entire area infested at the end of the season amounted to only 6.9 per cent. This method may prove useful for small isolated spots of infestation occurring on a valuable piece of land. Also it was found in Arizona that root-rot injury to cotton was reduced by the application of barnyard manure.

Telephones Greetings Across the Continent

Three-year-old Phyllis Sholl, of Fremont, Nebraska, is no respecter of distances. She telephoned birthday greetings halfway across the continent to her Granddaddy, in Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, the other day. "The voice came in as clearly as if Phyllis were here in the room with me," said Granddaddy, who incidentally is just eighty years older than Phyllis.

TELEPHONE COMPANY EXPANDING PLANT

All over the states of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, telephone men are running new wires and making extensions to the telephone plant for new telephones. Above is a line gang of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania and Associated Companies laying a new cable containing 1200 pairs of wires. This need for greater telephone facilities is evidence of the growth and expansion of general business in the states where the company operates.

Selection of Dairy Cattle Breeds Influenced by Shows

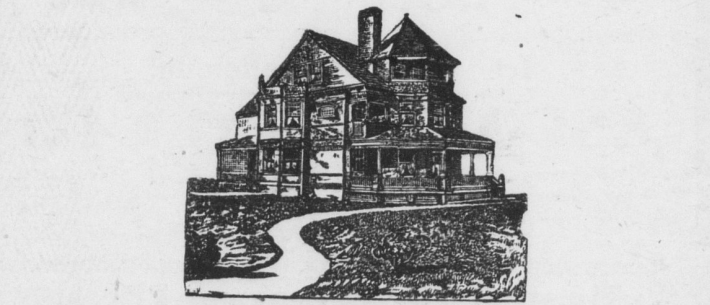

A good typical Ayrshire sire Putting on the finishing touches

Many a man who is undecided as to the breed of dairy cattle that he will select has been influenced in making his decision by the animals of a particular breed that he has seen in public. The individual breeder secures a great deal of advertising as the result of exhibiting at fairs, or in offering good animals at public sales. It gives people a chance to see and know the kind of stock that a man is breeding and paves the way for future business. It is essential that special care and attention be given dairy animals far in advance of the time that they are to be exhibited or sold. Exhibiting or selling animals publicly in their every day clothes is poor advertising and puts them at a disadvantage when the competition is keen. It takes several weeks to put a dairy animal in good show condition and what applies to fitting for show applies as well to fitting for sale. It is important that the dairy animal to be exhibited or sold be in good flesh. A good covering of flesh adds to size, increases smoothness and indicates that the animal is thrifty and in good health. Dairy animals being fitted need extra feed. Stabling and blanketing are great aids in putting the hair and hide in condition. By stabling in summer, the animal is protected from the hot sun which makes the hide harsh and stiff to the touch. A roomy box stall that is kept clean and well bedded provides desirable quarters. Continuous blanketing helps keep the animal clean, sweats the hide, thus improving its handling qualities and makes the hair lay to the body. The blanket need not be expensive but it must be tied on securely. Every dairy animal that is to be exhibited should have the hair clipped from the entire body about three weeks previous to the date of the show or sale. This will get rid of the old hair and allow a new, even growth to develop which will greatly improve the appearance and increase the selling value of the animal. A point often overlooked in the preparation of a dairy animal for show or sale is that of training to lead and stand properly. An untrained animal cannot display its good points to advantage if it combats the efforts of the attendant to exhibit it properly. A little time spent each day in training to handle properly will save effort and embarrassment at the show or sale and increase the financial return. While in the show or sale ring, the man in charge of an animal should have one main thought in mind, namely the health of the animal to advantage. By this is meant that when it stands, its feet are properly placed, back straight and head alert. Any movement on the part of the attendant or animal should be as graceful as possible. Until the ribbons are placed or the auctioneer's hammer falls, take no chances.
