Petrified Deer Tracks Found in Yellowstone
Yellowstone Park, Wyo. — Deer tracks in what was once sand in the geyser region of Yellowstone National park but long since converted into rock by the deposition of dissolved silica, were among the striking curiosities discovered here this season by Ranger Philip Martindale, who first noticed the petrified tracks, tells of his discovery:
"The tracks were very plain im-

Keep in Trim!
Good Elimination Is Essential to Good Health.
THE kidneys are the blood filters. If they fail to function properly there is apt to be a retention of toxic poisons in the blood. A dull, languid feeling, sometimes, toxic backaches, headaches, and dizziness are symptoms of this condition. Further evidence of improper kidney function is often found in burning or scanty passage of secretions. Each year more and more people are learning the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, in this condition. Scarcely a nook or cranny anywhere but has many enthusiastic users. Ask your neighbor!

pressions about one-half inch deep in rock which was no doubt formed many hundreds of years ago by the flow of water depositing silica on the river bank from what is now an extinct geyser or hot spring high up on the bank or it may have been that there were closer springs, for the ground is very hot within a few feet of the exposed tracks.
"It seems evident that the process of hardening and cooling took place quickly in the mixing of the river sand and gravel wash and the deposits of silica, forming a conglomerate rock which looks very much like rough concrete."

Picturesqueness is to be sacrificed to efficiency in Italy by a new order banishing donkeys and dog- and oxen-drawn vehicles from the streets.

NEW YORK'S WATER SUPPLY IS MENACED
Earth Cracks Cause Leakage From Reservoir.
New York.—The New York city water supply is threatened by silver lining cracks, which are slowly draining the $100,000,000 Ashokan reservoir in the Catskill mountains, the New York Herald-Tribune says. The reservoir is twelve miles long and three miles wide.
A recent survey, the newspaper says, supports the theory that millions of gallons are seeping away through the veins and thence to the surface again in adjacent water courses. The reservoir, described as rivaling the Panama canal as an engineering achievement, is a virtually empty. There has been no lack of rain, however, and feed streams are flush from bank to bank.
Eposus creek, the main source of supply, has been found to diminish its flow shortly after entering the great basin, only to rise a few miles below the dam to full power. It is said to be delivering only 200,000,000 gallons daily of the 450,000,000 gallons needed for New York. Of the 120,000,000,000 gallons the reservoir was designed to hold less than 10,000,000,000 remain.
Thaddeus Merriam, chief engineer of the board of water supply, denied that the diminishing water supply in the Ashokan reservoir was due to seepage through subterranean cracks. The shortage, he said, was due to the fact that there was little snow last winter and a small amount of rainfall during the summer.

Salivary Glands Hold Mystery for Physiologist
Battle Creek, Mich.—It is, of course, well known that the sight or smell, or even the thought of food can provoke a profuse salivation in a hungry individual. But the sense of taste act differently, according to the work of Dr. W. N. Boldyreff, physiologist here.
"Agreeable foods," Doctor Boldyreff explained, "diminish the activity of the salivary glands, while disagreeable substance, such as acids or alkalis, increase it. In the latter case the flow of saliva may triple itself, and in the former case it may be reduced by one-third."
No explanation is given of this unexpected finding. In the case of "disagreeable" substances, it is probable that nature is attempting to dilute and wash away the offender. But why the salivary glands should become shy and bashful in the presence of beefsteak is as yet an unexplained mystery. The experimenter is, however, a valuable demonstration of the totally different effects obtained when an organ is stimulated through different routes.

States Must Grow Timber
State rather than Federal activity in forest conservation, must be looked to for the main progress in timber growing from now on, according to W. B. Greeley, Chief Forester, United States Department of Agriculture.
Thomas Carlyle was the originator of the term "The Insuperable Turk." It occurred in an article written by him before he attained fame.

Flowers picked in the morning in Holland are on sale the same afternoon being carried by airplane from one country to the other.
