Sister That Wasn't

a Wall Flower

A YOUNG man and a young woman in evening dress stood in the shadows of the veranda of the brightly lighted country club. "You've got to promise before you go in," said the young man rather sharply. "I'm certainly not going to let you carry on the way you did at the Bensons' last week." "Well, I couldn't help it," protested the girl. "If the men are so foolish as to want to dance with me-why, it isn't my fault. I should think you'd be proud of having a sister that wasn't a wall flower-"Well, I wasn't proud of the way you carried on-eight or nine men hanging around you all evening and a dozen girls sitting out every dance. So I'm telling you right now that unday at Lititz with Mr. and Mrs. less you promise you won't dance at

Nancy was both very pretty and unusually fascinating-moreover she danced divine-But through dance after dance that night she sat at one end of the rooms. If the rejected young man venured to sit down beside her she would keep* the conversation general, sharing him with the girl or girls beside her. Sometimes she would suggest to a young man whom she had refused that he had better dance with one of the other girls not dancing, and it was only when she had contrived to find partners for all the wall flowers that she felt free to dance herself A tall, slender young man in fauli less tuxedo seemed to have taken root among the wall flowers, Mr. Hill Fred Hill-was his name. He had een brave enough to dance twice with enormous Sally Jones. Sally was a nice girl and rather jolly, but Sally weighed two hundred pounds and was not easy to dance with. Then Fred Hill had worried through a dance with a girl who said she had never danced but once before. Later he contrived to sit and talk through a dance with a girl who stammeredbut said she didn't want to dance as she found conversation so much more worth while. Once when Nancy had somehow contrived to provide the last wall flower with a partner Fred Hill wandered over to her, and, hardly looking at her, said in a tone of forced cheerfulness: "May I have this dance-I haven't been presented but that doesn't matter at this club." Then he looked at Nancy and realized how very pretty she really was. little girl" Fred said her after they had danced for a few minutes."Sitting all alone with the Perhaps she was killed according to wall flowers when you're the prettiest girl in the room-and the best taken on board. But she may have dancer I ever met."

When this dance was over Fred asked Nancy to go out on the veranda with him, and Nancy accepted. After all, she thought, he wasn't particularly popular. He had been dancing with the wall flowers-didn't seem had told her to be good to the shy people from Viken were semibarbarmen. After that she insisted on going back to the place of the wall flowers and at her bidding Fred danced with the girl who weighed two hundred stored and is now in the historical muand later talked with the girl who stammered. After that she felt that they both deserved a respite and they rambled down a path toward the golf

"Funny little girl," Fred was saying as he kissed her hand. "I feel if I had known you always. I'm not going to let you forget me. I'm going to come and see you tomorrow-and the next day and the next day and every day after that, "I'll tell you something funny," con-"My sister Alice and I tinued Fred. have belonged to this club forever. I've been coming to dances all summer and there are always a number of very popular girls of the sort the men are always swarning around. Well, I've always been one of the swarmers, I never cared a rap for a girl who wasn't hetly pursued by at least a dozen other men. Well, my sister Alice told me that it was disgraceful-the way all the men hung round the few popular girls and a lot of really nice little girls had to sit out their dances. Alice made me promise tonight that I'd devote myself to the girl who didn't have so much attention. Well, I thought they were all hopeless. But Alice was right."

"Alice was very kind to make you dance with us," said Nancy simply, Fred was holding Nancy's little hand in his and bent and kissed a most solemnly. "Blessed little wall flower," he said-"I love you."

The next day began an intensive sort of courtship and a week later Fred and Nancy were engaged. "I told Fred the quiet little girls weren't so very popular were really more worth while." Alice "And now he knows I was right.

Intelligence Test

England, too, has taken to intelligence test questions, but the newspapers apparently believe their readers have a rather high standard of intelligence, judging by sample questions asked: What is the datum line? What part of a chicken is the furculum? Who built the Colosseum at Rome? Which state in the U.S. A. is known as the Blue Hen state? What is a plantigrade animal? What is the height of the Great Pyramid? How long has China been Republican? How long is the Panana canal?

Golf Links Built on Sand A wandering Scot's first glimpse of the empty sand flats in front of Sandwich, England, about 1885 resulted in the construction of the Royal St. George's golf links, one of the finest courses in England. Indeed there are only three other courses in England that class with it, the Westward Ho, the Hoylake and the Rye links. All that once empty plat is now given over to golf, and in the minds of most Englishmen Sandwich has become a synonym for the finest golf that England affords.-New York Times.

Common-Law Marriage

A common-law marriage is a mar riage by mutual consent alone, without any ceremony of any kind, either ecclesiastical or civil. The evidence of such a marriage may be writings, declarations, or merely the conduct of the parties. Such a marriage is said to be consensual; that is, existing merely by virtue of consent or acquies Common-law marriages are recognized by the law of England and by the laws of several of our states.

Laughter

Somebody has described laughter as "a faculty bestowed exclusively upon man," and one which there is, therefore, a sort of impiety in not exercising as frequently as we can One may say with Titus that we have lost a day if it shall have passed without laughter. "An inch of laugh is worth an ell of moan in any state of market," says one of the old Eng lish fathers. Pilgrims at the shrine of Mecca consider laughter so essential a part of their devotion that they call upon the prophet to preserve them from sad faces.-From Harper' Easy Chair, 1852.

The man who thought a buggy was good enough

IN THE old days, a solid, conservative citizen might sniff and tell you he didn't read advertising.

He didn't think so much of the horseless carriage, either. The telephone was newfangled, and an insult to the United States mails. As for radio, aeroplanes, wireless photography—if they had been born then, he probably would have thought them a bit immoral. But he's changed. He's been educated. His point of view has been made broader and more modern. He has been civilized-by the automobile, the telephone, radio, advertising. Every single one has opened up new paths for him, taught him new things. Advertising, especially. Advertising tells him the newest things to wear, the best things to eat. Advertising tells his wife how to make a home up to date and attractive. Advertising tells him the prices to pay for things he buys, saves him from the old-fashioned ways of doing business-helps him live well, keeps him modern.

Advertising can help you. The advertisements in this paper arehere to tell you many things that make life more comfortable, more interesting, happier. Read them faithfully. They'll keep you abreast of the times. They'll prevent you from becoming the type of old fogy-who-sniff-doesn't read advertising.

Mount Joy Bulletin Advertising is the key to modernity
