Old Orphan School Quite a Land Mark
(From Page One)
Allisterville: All these schools were supported by the government and the buildings were sub-let by them. In 1887, over four hundred children were being taken care of at the Mount Joy Soldiers' Orphan's School.
From time to time, one then another of these schools, were discontinued; the children being transferred to another one of the schools, which had better and more commodious quarters.
The general supervisor of these schools was Senator George W. Wright, of Mercer, was appointed by the state, and had charge of McAllisterville, Mercer and Mount Joy. These three schools were among the last to be consolidated, and later discontinued. His duties consisted mainly in selecting a principal, teachers, matron, attendant, baker, cook, dining room lady, nurse, seamstress, for each of these three schools.
Senator Wright passed away in February, 1892.
The boys were given a general school training, manual training, agriculture, music and military drill.
The girls, besides school work, were taught dressmaking, domestic science, music, general housework, and physical culture.
All pupils, boys and girls, were admitted to this school, regardless of age, color, or religion; some having been admitted when mere babies. At the age of sixteen, if they had a parent or relative, they were sent home; if not, the authorities at the institution, secured homes among strangers for them.
The main building of this institution was constructed three stories, basement, and a belfry. The first floor was composed of classrooms, reception room, parlor, broad, open stairway and spacious hall; the second floor consisted of the office and boys' and girls' infirmaries; the third floor was entirely devoted to dormitories for boys; the bell, which hung in the belfry, called all classes announced rising time and bedtime. The bell now is used at the school house at Florin, Pa.
The east wing of the main building was two stories and a basement. The dining room, bakery, store room and kitchen were on the first floor; the second floor was devoted to the employees as dormitories.
The west wing was also two stories and a basement. The first floor was used as a chapel, and school-room, the second, as boys' dormitories.
The girls' dormitories were in a separate building east of the main building. The first floor was used as a laundry and a girls' playroom; the second floor was composed of dormitories and also a room in which to sew for the children.
The boys' building was also a separate structure. The first floor consisted of a male attendant's office, clothing room, store room for military equipment, and lavatory; the second and third floors were used as dormitories for the boys.
In the winter, the boys played in the basement of west wing of the main building; the girls played on the first floor of the girls' dormitories' building.
The boys were uniformed in blue coats and grey pants; the girls, red dresses and pink aprons.
A beautifully terraced campus lay in the front of the buildings. Gravel walks, benches, shrubbery and magnificent trees, of which four maple trees are still standing on the top of the terrace, helped to beautify this school. This campus extended to the present alley, south of the building, where the orchard extended to the home now occupied by Mrs. Harry Wintermyer and family.
The meadow included all between Snyder's Woods and the present Eli Hostetter property.
Some of the teachers roomed in the Winbrenner property, now owned by M. K. Brubaker estate. Mrs. Hannah Ferguson lived in the present Martin Brubaker home. Mr. and Mrs. Schaffer lived in the present Gable property.
The spacious porch at the main building, supported by four large columns, added to its beauty. Continued
The girls' and boys' dormitories were frame; the main building was erected of massive stone. All rooms throughout all the buildings were numbered. All hooks, for wraps or clothing, were also numbered.
Numerous outbuildings also belonged to the school, one of which stands at present; that is one which the barns. All pigs, raised or butchered at the school were also raised thereon.
Some of our townspeople, and others familiar to us, were employed at the school, as follows: Mr. D. F. Gable, male attendant for three years; Mrs. Gable, nurse, for three years; Mrs. Wm. Scholing, a cook; Mr. Scholing, a baker; Miss Helen Buhl, music director; Mrs. Bobbs, laundress; Mrs. McClune, matron; Prof. John Smith; principal; Mrs. Sarah Schrader, laundress; Miss Anna Boyce, dining room lady.
The output of this school was excellent, sending out into the world, boys, who later became prominent lawyers, professors and doctors; the girls, also became fine teachers, musicians and homemakers.
Some of the output of the school are: John Welby, former governor of the state of Washington; John Kephart, Judge of the Supreme Court, Cambria County; Prof. T. C. Knowles, principal of Pottsville High School; Dr. Brown, prominent Philadelphia physician and others.
The spiritual part of the children was developed, as well as all others. The school was undenominational, but children were compelled to attend church services.
The school was discontinued in 1890 and all children sent to Chester Springs. Nevertheless, the memories can never be dimmed; happy childhood days; boyhood and girlhood, and finally into the world, far and near.
Every year these remaining orphans gather here and exchange old reminiscences, look at the old school; visit and, in general, hold the annual meeting of the Sixteeners' Association. The derivation of this name comes from the fact that all orphans were discharged from the home at the age of sixteen years.
Mr. W. B. Detwiler bought the buildings, grounds, and all pertaining to school, complete in 1890.
Extensive remodeling has been done, interior and exterior, and more is being planned to beautify the old school. Bit by bit, parts of the grounds were sold and modern homes erected thereon, but never—no, never—will the memory ever fade.

WEEKLY LETTER WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE BULLETIN BY DR. DAVID H. REEDER
Making men over—A few weeks ago I told you that in some, yes, many respects, a man's body could be compared to a house.
It can be torn down and rebuilt. Not in the same manner, however. It must be done little by little, a careful process.
The plans and specifications must be studied and the weak points overcome.
The right kind of material must be used in the rebuilding. Old and useless material must be carefully removed.
If I was to let you read some of the letters I am receiving from those who are going through the process you would believe every word said by the famous Dr. Edward E. Slosson in his recent lecture on "Creative Chemistry."
Many were quite skeptical about the statements made by the famous scientist but the advanced student who has had years of training and experience will not deny but rather admit that Dr. Slosson is inclined to be safe and conservative.
He claims that creative chemistry will soon be able to supply "personality." That homely people may be made attractive and lethargy may be supplanted by pep, vim and vivaciousness. Coldness of disposition by sympathy and stupidity by wit and wisdom.
The nature and temperament of man may be changed, or so altered and improved by creative chemistry that he virtually becomes a new creature.
You know and I know from personal observation that by taking in to the body through the mouth certain chemicals or substances, such as wine or other alcoholic materials, opium, cocaine, etc., that a pure clean person becomes vile and unclean. The kind and unattractive father becomes an ugly and quarrelsome brute, a thief, a liar and even a murderer. Now if the wrong kind of chemicals can do so much damage to a good person is it not logical to believe that the right kind can be found to change the evil person into good.
I do not wholly agree with some of the methods used at present, but I am always open to investigate and prove anything which may be of value.
When Dr. Koch said that he had made a synthetic serum which destroyed cancer growth I was skeptical, but he convinced me by a practical demonstration and I was glad.
I feel inclined to remove the limit of 100 Volunteers who will undertake to rebuild their sick, diseased and worn out bodies.
Letters such as I am receiving are worth while. One woman weighed two hundred and seven pounds and was mentally sick. You know what I mean—couldn't even write a letter. Her daughter took of her pitiable condition and undertook to be the nurse and carry out my directions. Now the mother writes splendid letters, she is nearly normal in weight and does her housework without tiring.
Another in the same mental condition, but "thin as a rail," is now of normal weight and sings happily at her work, which is a joy instead of a burden. She also now writes splendid letters of her health and happiness.
All readers of this publication are at liberty to write for information upon any subject pertaining to health. Address all communications to Dr. David H. Reeder, 2131 Main Street, Kansas City, Missouri giving full name and address and at least six cents in postage.

Many modern words and figures of speech are based upon the devouring of food. The word "gnaw" originally meant to gnaw or nibble; "fret" meant to eat or devour; "remorse" meant to bite, and "worry" to strangle.
The earliest measurements were based on parts of the human body. The "inch" developed from the length of the thumb joint, the "hand" was the four inches across the human hand and the "span," nine inches, was the space from the end of the thumb to the end of the little finger.

"THE MODERN GIRL"
by
FOSTER TEA FRYE
Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania
Blessings on thee, Little Saint,
Hob-Haired Girl with Cheeks of Paint;
With thy little Powdered Nose,
And thy turned-down silken Hose;
With thy Red lips, redder more,
Kissed by Lip-stick from the Store.
Thou art sure a charming Girl,
With thy Ar-ti-ficial Curl;
And the Rings upon thy Ear,
Keep the Flies in constant Fear;
While the Rough upon thy Face,
Adds to thy en-dearing Grace.
Thy complexion when at School,
Mocks a Doctor's Word and Rule;
And the Dresses which you Wear,
Cause the Men to look and Stare;
While the Knowledge in thy Head,
Sure from Books was never Read.
Knowledge, such as how to Dress,
And to win a man's Car-ess;
How, and where to always Eat,
When you're taken for a Treat;
So this Wish I do un-furl,
Would I were, a Modern Girl.
