

OWL-LAFFS

O. W. L. (On With Laughter)

Just a little advice to you fellows who expect to celebrate the Fourth. Be careful you don't get shot or even half shot.

Our office devil had a new girl the other night and he declared she was a peach. One of our lady linotype operators said: "She mighta been a peach alright but from all indications her mother didn't know how to preserve her."

There's a certain lady in town has some bean. I saw better heads on umbrella handles.

Spook Schneider declares that if brains were ink, she wouldn't have enough to make a period.

At that you can't expect anything given to you nowa days except kicks.

Edgar Hagenberger claims that women have a smaller vocabulary than men, but its more attractive.

Just then I heard some guy chime in by saying: "I wonder how the heck "Hagy" knows."

A kid went down street last evening singing: Shoe the feet and Dress the hair But let the lady's Back go bare.

One of our chicks told me that when it comes to love making, even the shallow woman is very deep.

"That's a point well taken," said one of our Boro Councilmen as he sat on his wife's hat from which she forgot to remove the pin.

I heard a certain man say that the fish sucker is much harder to catch than the human.

Did you ever notice that a fellow who always wants to rule or ruin usually does both if given half a chance?

A fellow on East Main street told me that marriage is never happy unless both get better mates than they deserve.

One of our Sunday School teachers asked a class if any of them could tell her anything about Good Friday. One youngster spoke up and said: "Why he's the fellow who did the house-work for Robinson Cruso."

A woman at Florin told her daughter she met her husband (the girl's father) at a dance hall.

The daughter replied: "So that's why you want me to keep away from dance halls?"

Just because they were given away, some brides think they are free soon as they are married.

Russell Halbleib told me yesterday he's good and sore ever since a week before school stopped. He said he studied the wrong lesson one evening and then school closed before they got that far back in the book.

One of our young flappers went to Lancaster and had her face lifted but she declares it fell again the minute she got the bill for the work.

But the thing that gets me is to hear a guy howl for sanitary drinking cups and then takes a swig out of any old flask offered him.

Had a fellow come into the office yesterday and say that it ain't gonna rain no, because he was to a ball game and got a rain check, now he can stop it any old time.

Then to think that men like that live and the good ones die.

While out calling a hostess gave the woman's son a piece of cake. Mother said: "What should you say Charles?"

Charles replied: "Give me another piece."

In front of the post office a few days ago a certain young lady remarked to her friend: "I saw a college boy run down."

The other answered: "Heavens they always are." A WISE OWL

Some Long Trips

A moon on a trip round the earth's equator would take about 17 days 8 hours, at a speed of 60 miles an hour. A little less than five years would cover the distance at the same speed round the sun. But to circle around the sun in our own star would take approximately 1,300 years for the diameter of orbits is estimated at more than 27,000,000 miles, which is more than 200 times that of the sun.

VALUABLE INFORMATION FOR MOTORISTS FURNISHED THE BULLETIN BY LANCASTER AUTOMOBILE CLUB

Tickets entitling children under twelve years of age to free rides on the various amusements at Carsonia Park, Reading, on the day of the Lancaster Automobile Club annual picnic are now being distributed at the club's headquarters, 10 South Prince Street, Lancaster. Members of the club are entitled to a strip of these tickets, without charge, for each child in the family under 12 years of age. They can be obtained by calling at the club offices.

The Automobile Club's annual picnic this year will be held Thursday, July 28, and elaborate plans are being made for the event. Several prizes will be awarded during the day to those attending.

The Ringold Band of Reading will furnish music and there will be a basket ball game and other features in addition to the regular attractions at the park. Ernest N. Smith, general manager of the American Automobile Association, will be one of the speakers, as also will be Benjamin Eynon, State Registrar of motor vehicles, and several other men of prominence in the motor world.

There will be the usual excellent road service and parking provisions. A rest tent for mothers is provided at the park and in addition there is a Red Cross tent in charge of a capable nurse.

The Lancaster Automobile Club extends a cordial welcome, whether members of the club or not, to attend this annual frolic.

Infants Fond of Music

Some infants may show a preference for different kinds of music even before they are a year old. In the opinion of a mother who has found that the time to teach children appreciation of good music is when they are very young says Popular Mechanics Magazine: Instead of singing her babies to sleep, she plays to them and has discovered that pieces of different rhythm and tempo seem to have different effects. One child apparently preferred music of rapid movement while another evidenced a liking for slower melodies. Five or ten minutes of soft playing usually sufficed to lull the children to sleep and often their crying could be stopped by playing for them.

Too Much to Expect

Angrily the policeman on point duty stopped the little car that had tried to sneak past his outstretched arm. "Can't you see me?" he demanded of the driver. "I—er—must confess I did," returned the motorist meekly. "Then why didn't you stop?" asked the policeman, becoming more angry than ever. "Well, I lost my head," explained the wrongdoer sadly. "I had just spent half an hour in getting this thing to start, and I thought it was a pity to stop her so soon."

Parting of the Ways

Reggie had been very rude to his father and had been sent to his bedroom as a punishment. A little later his mother went to see what the boy was doing and found him writing. "Is that a letter to daddy asking forgiveness?" she said. "If you must know," replied Reggie. "I'm writing to the archbishop of Canterbury to get a divorce from both of you."—London "Tri-Bits."

It's Not But Who By CORONA REE

ANN opened her silver scrutinized her pretty face a little concentrating mirror, put a dab of powder here and there on an already faultless make-up and closed the tiny case with a snap.

Jim, seated nearby, made no attempt to break the peaceful silence. Instead, he crossed his legs, lit a cigarette and leaned back against the divan with the manner of one who welcomes a moment's rest.

"Well, I'll not ask you again," said Ann coldly, after a long pause. "Thank goodness, that's settled," he exclaimed with relief.

He flicked the ashes off the end of his cigarette and replaced it in his mouth.

"For pity's sake don't throw hot ashes on the rug. You're the most inconsiderate person. Why, oh, you'd aggravate a saint."

Ann dabbed a filmy her streaming eyes, then stopped weeping and stared at her coat sleeve. "I've been crying her most melting."

"Listen, Jimmie, make Ann so sorry she can't cry any more."

She drew her flush of anger. "I can't laugh, I'm not laughing."

"Oh, I don't know, I've been laughing before now."

Ann ignored. "I'm sick of you, I'll tell you of going to ask don't do it with Basil."

She gave me and he said, "Say, you're mad, aren't you?"

"I'm not mad, but a bit. I'm hurt. That you would treat me this way—you of all people. Oh, the world is too unkind!" Ann buried her face in a lavender taffeta cushion and burst into tears. "Oh, if I could only get away—away from everything and everybody. Men are such b-b-rutes!"

"That reminds me, I wouldn't mind getting away for a while myself," Jim rose and walked across the room and turned back and approached the divan again.

"Tell you what, Ann, I'd quit this if I were you. Ber your face looks as swollen as if you'd been in a yellow jacket's nest."

But Ann only kicked viciously at him with a disengaged foot and buried her head a little deeper in the cushion.

"I'd call that exhibit A" when it comes to genuine unadulterated tantrums and I'm sure you'd get the price in any baby show. Now quit that crying and get up from there. What you ask is unreasonable and I've no idea of humoring you. Get up!"

"If father were living he'd let me do it," she mumbled.

"Not much he wouldn't! No she said. That won't work either. Get up and behave yourself."
