She Won in Spite of Lulu

By JANE OSBORN

FTER Eleanor Pickett had worked as stenographer in the insurance office of Mansard & Son she had to admit that she was in love with young George Mansard, and she had, moreover, to admit that she was jealous of Lulu Otis, the plump, strawberry blonde grass widow who sat at the telephone switchboard in the outer office of the Granger establishment, and spoke of herself as Mr. Mansard's private secretary. The fact that Eleanor took Mr. Mansard's dictation and had got so that she could attend to much of his correspondence alone made no difference to Lulu. Lulu insisted on taking charge of him. There was something unmistakably magnetic about Lulu and Eleanor tried to stifle her jealous feelings when Mr. Mansard loitered in the outer office exchanging slangy badinage with the buxom Lulu.

"You're terribly old-fashioned," Lulu had told her, on several occasions, and one day she added: "If you want to get in right with the boss you've got to show more pep. Of course while I'm here all he expects of you is to take his dictation, but if I were to leave, why he'd want a private secretary. I'd like to see you get the job, but you've got to remember that a man like Mr. Mansard needs a private sec retary with an awful lot of pepomeone to kind of buck him up. "But you're not thinking of leav ing?" asked Eleanor timidly.

"Well, you know, girlie-a girl like me doesn't intend to work forever. I've only just got my freedom-" By freedom Eleanor knew that Lulu referred to her divorce papers which she had received only a few weeks before. "And I'm not going to be in too big a hurry this time.'

Eleanor felt her cheeks burn with suspicious jealousy. She had seen Bob Mansard talking for a full half hour with Lulu that very morning.

"You know I always wear earrings to the office. Personally I think it's worth while to doll up a bit. The boss likes it and a lot of nice fellows come in here all the time. Of course you've got a nice complexion but just a bit of make-up does help a girl's appearance an awful lot-"

The next morning Eleanor purposely reached the office ten minutes ahead of her usual time of arrival so that

Days at she could be seated at her desk before Mr. Mansard or Lulu arrived. She didn't want to be too conspicuous in her new earrings.

But apparently the bit of makeup or the earrings did make a difference because when Bob Mansard came into the room he whistled. "Why the war paint?" he asked in a tone of unusual familiarity. "And great scot, dingle-dangles on your ears "Don't you like them?" asked Elea nor putting her hands up to the ear-

"Oh, they're all right-only I think I like you better 'au naturel.' Eleanor swiftly pulled off the ear rings and tucked them into the draw er of her desk. "I didn't think you cared as mucl as that what I thought," said Bot Mansard, and Eleanor merely looked up at him with a smile.

Weeks and months went on and the situation so far as Eleanor and Bol Mansard were concerned went without change. It seemed, however to Eleanor as if she noted signs of in creasing intimacy between him an Lulu. Doubtless now that she had really gained her "freedom" he was courting her in good earnest. Then came one Saturday morning when Eleanor could not fail to see an un wonted brilliance in Lulu's eyes.

"Heard the excitement?" Luiu asked Eleanor and then went on to explain "I'm leaving for good in a few hours girlie. I just came around to sort o say good-by. I'm going to get married

"I-hope you'll be very happy-Oh I'm sure you will," stammered Eleanor and then dreading the answer to the question-"May I know the name of the lucky man?" Lulu's "You ask Mr. Mansard after I've gone," left no doubt whatever in Eleanor's mind Of course Eleanor didn't ask Mr Mansard anything about it but just went to her desk and worked like a Trojan all the morning. At half-past eleven Bob Mansard drew up a ch. beside her desk and dropped limply Ice Cream, Groceries and asked Eleanor timidly. "Lulu, indeed," said Robert. "Annow Eleanor I'm going to make long story short. I've loved you from the first day you came-but I've never dared tell you until now."

"But why did you have to wait?" she asked bewildered. "Because I couldn't bear to be alon-here with her-with Lulu. I was afraid she would never leave. You've no idea how she bossed me and both ered me before you came, and I didn't dare discharge her." "But I thought she thought you were one of the strings to her bow-"Maybe she did," sighed Bob Mansard, taking Eleanor's little hand in his. "But I introduced her to a su of money. But don't let money. But don't let's talk about them-Eleanor-please tell me you ove me a little." Converight.)
