EXCELLENT MARKETING HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

The homegrown early apple season is nearing its height, according to the Pennsylvania and Federal Bureau of Markets, although the official estimates indicate a considerably lighter crop than last year.

Williams Early Red is the most important variety on the Philadelphia market at this time. It is medium to large in size and is valued by many as an eating variety. Dealers state that the quality of the Williams Early Red is excellent this year. The favorable season is particularly responsible for this while the fact that homegrown fruit is tree-ripened makes it better flavored.

The Wealthy is also appearing on the market and will reach its height this month. This is a striped fruit of some tartness and suited particularly for sauce and pies. The Gravenstein which will come on the market in the near future is another desirable variety, being suited for both eating and cooking.

One very popular variety is the Starr. This apple is generally large and green in color with a mellow flavor. This apple is particularly suited for baking since its firm texture enables it to make a very attractive appearance after cooking. This variety is now fairly plentiful and will be on the market until the middle of the month.

Supplies of Yellow Transparent are less plentiful as the season is practically over. These are recommended as a sauce apple and are about the first early apple to come on the market in the spring.

Save Sour Cream
throw away sour cream. Simply clabbered for desiccated powdered sugar, honey, and a little sweet cream. Add a little sweet cream, waffles, cookies, or cake, and use for dressing, or use for dipping, with chop.

TEN YEARS OF FARM ORGANIZATION GROWTH

In the 10 years from 1915 to 1925 the number of farmers' marketing and purchasing associations, chiefly cooperated, listed by the United States Department of Agriculture practically doubled, and their aggregate membership increased by 315 per cent. The amount of business handled by the associations reporting in 1925 was 277 per cent greater than that handled by those reporting in 1915. Although not all the active associations in the country make reports to the department, those who do not are few and small.

The department had 10,803 associations listed on its books at the close of 1925. These associations had an aggregate membership of 2,700,000. Many farmers, however, belonged to more than one association so that the total number of farmers served by cooperative associations in the United States is estimated at 1,900,000.

The associations from which the department has obtained records transacted business in 1925 to the amount of $2,400,000,000, probably nine-tenths of which amount represented sales of farm products, while the rest represented purchases of farm supplies. Seventy per cent of the total was handled by cooperatives in 15 states constituting the north central and Pacific coast groups. The remaining 30 per cent was handled by associations scattered through 33 states.

The largest volume of business credited to any one state was $223,980,000, for 1,383 associations in Minnesota. California came next with $223,960,000 worth of business done through 350 associations. Illinois was third, Iowa fourth, Wisconsin fifth, Ohio sixth, New York seventh, and Kansas eighth in the amount of farmers' collective business handled. These eight states transacted 52 per cent of the total cooperative business of the country.

Marketing and purchasing associations in 10 states—Minnesota, Iowa, California, Wisconsin, Illinois, North Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, New York, and Michigan—constituted 63 per cent of all the active cooperatives in the country for the 10-year period. Membership increases of 1,000 per cent or more occurred in Missouri, Oklahoma, Georgia, Indiana, North Carolina, and Mississippi. Six states—Washington, Delaware, New Jersey, Idaho, Nevada, and Rhode Island—had fewer cooperative association members in 1925 than in 1915. Only one state, however, Nevada, handled a smaller volume of cooperative business in 1925 than in 1915.

DOG OWNERS MAY MAKE MORE REGULATIONS

Continued abuse of the laxity of the present dog law by dog owners is slowly bringing about a change of sentiment in regard to tolerating the dog nuisance, officials of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry state. This sentiment, if actively aroused, will undoubtedly result in a demand for more regulations, they believe.

"A dog properly trained and taken care of is an asset and the owner of such a dog may well feel proud of his possession while uncontrolled dogs are a menace to property and wild life in the country and a nuisance and menace in boros and cities," it is explained.

"No one will dispute that a properly controlled dog is one of the best of pets and companions while the neglected dog is a discredit to its owner and a troublemaker in the community. Owners who pay no attention to the care or control of their dogs are unfair to the dog and lack respect for the rights of others.

"Uncontrolled dogs destroy more wild life many times over than all the illegal hunting and kill and injure annually in this state cattle, hogs, thousands of sheep and poultry. Hundreds of persons are bitten while engaged in peaceful pursuits. Thousands of complaints are made about dogs running over lawns destroying flowers, shrubbery, gardens and committing other nuisances. Practically all of these damages and complaints are due to the neglect and carelessness of the dog owner. What would be the attitude of those same owners and others if sheep or hogs were permitted to run uncontrolled on their property or on the streets and public highways?"

"Pennsylvania dog laws in the past have been drawn with the thought of not legislating too drastically against the dog or the owners. The present Dog Law cannot be considered drastic but continued abuse of the laxity of this law by dog owners may result in a demand for more legislation. Dog owners, from the standpoint of the rights of protection of others, for their own protection, and last but not least the protection and welfare of the dog should give more thought and attention to the control of their dog."

Wheat Inspections Heavier
Soft winter wheat inspections in Philadelphia increased sharply to 108 cars and the most noticeable feature was the larger percentage of No. 2 wheat. There were 17 carloads of No. 2 Red Winter wheat, 10 of No. 2 Red Winter garlicky and 15 of No. 2 Red Winter Garlicky Smutty. Excessive moisture continues to be responsible for the low grade of most cars, although eight per bushel is becoming more important.

ROADS ARE PATROLLED TO STOP BEETLE SPREAD

All important roads leading out of the Japanese beetle quarantine area in southeastern Pennsylvania are being patrolled and inspections made of vehicles to check spread of the beetle in farm products and cut flowers. The patrol work started last month and will continue until October 15.

The road inspectors are on the job 24 hours a day and will be kept busy seven days a week. They have been given orders to intercept any vehicle passing out of the quarantine area that is carrying any product, enumerated in the regulations, which has not been certified as free of beetles.

The State and Federal governments, as in the past, will prosecute persons who violated the quarantine last year, one party was fined $100 for grossly disregarding the regulations. However, the public, realizing the danger of spreading the beetles, has been very willing to cooperate and in only a few cases has it been necessary to resort to legal measures.

In addition to the road patrols, offices for district supervisors have been established at Lancaster, Lebanon, Harrisburg, Allentown, Hamburg, Oxford (Chester County), and Norristown. These supervisors will certify products for transportation from the beetle area.

J. K. Gould, who has been associated with the Japanese beetle work in Pennsylvania and New Jersey for the past five years, is in charge of the quarantine enforcement work in this State. He is stationed at Norristown.

The area quarantined in Pennsylvania because of the Japanese beetle includes the following: Counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Berks, Montgomery, Northampton, Lehigh, Chester, Delaware, Lancaster, and Lebanon; the townships of Conowingo, Londonderry, Derry, South Hanover, West Hanover, East Hanover, Swatara, Lower Swatara, Lower Swatara, and Susquehanna, and the City of Harrisburg, in Dauphin county, and, the townships of East Pennsboro and Lower Allen in Cumberland County.
