

SUPERIOR COURT RULES AGAINST "CUT-IN" DRIVES

"Cut in" demons, beware! The Superior Court of Pennsylvania has just handed down a ruling that fixes upon the driver who "cuts in" responsibility for damages in event his action results in injury to another.

In discussing a recent decision of the Superior Court, which held a "cut in" driver liable for damages, the Keystone Automobile Club, in a statement recently, said:

"Everyone knows the menace of the 'cut in' driver, but his status is definitely determined by a decision announced by Judge Trexler, of the State Superior Court. The court held that it was 'negligence' for the driver of a truck proceeding in the same direction as a trolley car to 'cut in' between the trolley and a parked automobile. A passenger on the trolley car was injured, and the decision awards damages against the truck owner, notwithstanding the contention of the defendant that the motorman of the car was equally negligent.

"The court points out that if the accident resulted solely from the negligence of the motorman there could be no recovery against the truck owner, but if the jury concluded that both the motorman and the truck driver were negligent, the fact would not prevent the plaintiff from recovering from the person sued. In other words, the decision means that it is no defense to raise the question of the other fellow's negligence when the facts show both to have been negligent."

Get Packing House Ready
Is the packing house ready for use? Are there any changes in arrangement that would contribute toward increased efficiency? Also thought and labor spent in improving the accommodations of the packing house pay big dividends.

Provide Drinking Cups
Drinking cups are practical, and Pennsylvania State College dairy specialists recommend that they be installed wherever it is possible to use them. Usually they pay for themselves the first winter.

FARMERS MAY SECURE VEGETABLE YEARBOOK

Practically all phases of the fruit and vegetable industry are discussed in the 1925 yearbook of the United States Department of Agriculture with special reference to the beginnings of horticulture in this country and to the economic importance of the fruit, vegetable, and nut industries in this country. Much of the material contained in this volume is of interest to many people who may not have access to a copy of the complete Yearbook, and for this reason the department has reprinted a 300-page section dealing primarily with the production of fruits, vegetables, and nuts, which will be distributed as Yearbook Separate No. 931-Y, "Fruit and Vegetable Production."

This "separate" is abundantly illustrated which makes it an interesting as well as a valuable reference or textbook on the history, distribution, and relative importance of the various crops of this branch of agriculture.

A copy of Yearbook Separate No. 931-Y, may be obtained, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

CLOVER FIELDS SOURCE OF NEW AND USEFUL STRAINS

All sweet clovers are variable in their habits of growth, and many individual plants of distinct type and form may be found in nearly any sweet-clover field. This offers an opportunity for the development of new strains of sweet clover for definite uses, according to L. W. Kephart, forage crop specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

There is considerable interest at present in the production of better hay varieties, he says, since the common sweet clovers, especially the white-flowered species, are too coarse and heavy to make good hay from the second year's growth. Several good hay varieties have already been developed, notably the early flowering Grundy County, Crystal Dwarf and Early Dwarf varieties of white sweet clover, and the Albrotta and Switzer variety of yellow sweet clover. Recently a type of sweet clover bearing many more and finer stems than the common western Canadian experiment stations, it is easily mistaken for that plant. This important discovery will no doubt add a distinct new type of forage plant to the present list.

The need for winter-hardy types has been met with in the Arctic, or Hansen's Siberian, a white flowered variety from western Canada. A sweet clover much better suited than the common sorts to the cold, dry climate of the northern Great Plains appears to have been developed at the Redfield, S. Dak. field station of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Several persons are endeavoring to find a sweet clover that will grow on acid soils, lack of lime being a serious hindrance to culture of the crop in many localities. Still others are trying to develop a strain suited to the drought and hot winds of the southern Great Plains.

A type of sweet clover that would be exceedingly useful, according to Mr. Kephart, is one that would remain green late in the fall, start growth early the next spring, and remain green and in good feeding condition well into the following summer. A number of experiments both on farms and at experiment stations, have approached this type with selections of common sweet clover. Perhaps even better results will come from tests now being made with species and varieties brought from Europe and eastern Asia, since such species this year having remained green six weeks later than any sweet clover heretofore grown.

OCASIONAL DRINK COSTS POSTMASTER $2,000
Francis M. Denver, postmaster of Blackwood, a borough in Camden county, is out of his $2,000 job because he admitted to postal officials that he "occasionally took a drink after hours."

A postal inspector recently called on me to inquire into charges which had reached the department that I had been drinking. Denver said, "and I told him I did occasionally take a drink in my own home."

"If I have to account to the government for every minute of the day, Uncle Sam can have the job. The salary isn't worth it."

Friends of Denver's declared the charges were outgrowth of a county political fight to oust him from the job.
