

OWL-LAFFS

Doc Heilig says you should be true to your teeth or they'll be false to you.

Some one said that two heads are better than one but I'll bet my worn out straw hat against your week's pay that after you've gone to movies.

A fellow in town declares that exaggeration isn't lying but believe me it's the best substitute I ever heard of.

Here's a wise crack from our office devil and its clean too: "Mr. Potato was all eyes for Miss Squash and they were to be married but the parson didn't turn up."

A Woman's Troubles A woman's always on the jump. Her troubles make a mere man grin;

Every now and then the average wife meets a hatched-faced woman she'd just love to have her husband live with for a while and get what was coming to him.

Scientists say they know the moon has nothing to do with rain fall and some of the old people here in town say they know better. We'll leave it up to you as to who is right.

There's a certain young fellow here in town who works at the cotton mill and he's trying his best to get ahead. I'm darn sure he needs one.

Some folks argue that fish can't live in hot water but I know they can. There are several married men in town who have been in hot water for a long time and are still very much alive—the poor fishes.

borrowing five dollars from his neighbor but he will have a blamed site more trouble getting it back.

Another dumb bell just blew in. His check which he gave to one of our stores came back marked "no funds" and when asked for an explanation he said: "It's mighty funny, I just read in the Bulletin that the bank had a surplus of nearly a million."

A lady went to Booth's store and asked for a pound of animal crackers but she said she didn't want any lions or tigers because they frighten the baby.

A small, henpecked, worried-looking man was about to take an examination for life insurance.

"You don't dissipate, do you?" asked the physician, as he made ready for tests. "Not a fast liver, or anything of that sort?"

The little man hesitated a moment, looking a bit frightened, then replied, in a small piping voice: "I sometimes chew a little gum."

Just doped out a hot one. I won't send any letters by air mail. When I want my letters to get to their destination in a hurry I write 'em on fly paper.

We had a new one in town Saturday night. A fellow drank something like hooch and then went home and tried to take his pants off over his head.

At last Tuesday's Rotary meeting Doc Garber announced that his daughter would play a piano solo, "The White Mule." She said: "No, father, the name of the selection is 'The White Donkey.'"

A fellow on East Main street told me he had a lot of trouble just how Doc happened to get confused.

Of course it wasn't any more of a mixture than Mr. Coventry, of the Grey Iron spoke about. He said a fellow went to the American store here and asked what those red berries were. The clerk said: "They are cranberries and they make much better apple-sauce than prunes."

A fellow who moved here recently told me that a lot of prominent citizens want him to return to his former home town. He says he gets letters from the leading merchants to come back and settle.

Out west men used to die with their boots on from six shooters now its from six cylinders.

When a drunken, unlicensed driver with one arm around a girl drives a stolen car with no lights and no license plates the wrong way on a one-way street, and, after running down two policemen, crashes into a police station—he is unlucky.

They tell this one on Charlie Roth. They say he accidentally cut a fellow in the neck several times while shaving him. Finally the customer asked for a glass of water and Charles inquired: "What's the matter, hair in your mouth?"

The fellow replied: "No I wanta see if my neck leaks."

Alfalfa Good Hay Pasture For hogs, alfalfa is the best pasture obtainable, furnishing a maximum supply of ideal forage weather. As many as 20 shoats per acre can be carried. Better plant some for pasturing next year.

FLOUR FROM PENNA. WHEAT BEST FOR PASTRIES

Many housewives are not aware that soft winter wheat flour made from Pennsylvania-grown wheat is recognized as the type most suitable for pastry making.

Recent tests have shown that Pennsylvania flour when milled from selected wheat has proved superior in the baking of pastry products, says the State Bureau of Markets.

SUCH IS THE LIFE OF A NEWSPAPER MAN

"Getting out a weekly paper is no picnic. If we print jokes, folks say we are silly. If we don't they say we are too serious. If we publish original stuff they say we lack variety. If we clip from other papers they say we are too lazy to write. If we stay in the office we ought to be out hunting up news. If we hunt up news, we are not tending to business in the office. If we wear old clothes, we're stingy. If we wear new ones, they're not paid for. Like as not, some one will say we swiped this article from another newspaper. We did."

Prepare Pullets For Laying

Give the early pullets proper care and feed now to fit them for the best possible production next winter. You cannot fill the egg basket when prices are high by stinting the pullets and delaying their production period.

FISHERMEN'S MECCA DESTROYED BY FIRE

Home of Izaak Walton, English Landmark.

Washington—Fishermen will be saddened to learn that Izaak Walton's thatched, half-timbered cottage at Shallowford, Staffordshire, has been destroyed by fire.

"England has lost one of her best beloved, literary landmarks and fishermen the home of the art's most famous exponent, with the destruction of Walton's country home," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"As St. Andrews, Scotland, is the mecca for golfers and Stratford-upon-Avon the shrine of drama lovers, so Shallowford has been the place of pilgrimage for fishermen," continues the bulletin.

"Northwest, a few miles from the Shallowford cottage lies Madeley, country seat of John Offley, Esquire, to whom Walton dedicated the 'Compleat Angler' in appreciation for permission to fish on Offley's estate. Northeast ripples the Dove through Dovecote, a green carpeted, English sort of canyon, where Walton fished with that young rake, Charles Cotton, who added to the 'Compleat Angler' the sections on fly-fishing.

"Nothing could be in greater contrast to an American sportsman's fishing camp than Cotton's fishing house on the Dove. The latter presents the appearance of a rather large, private manse. Its walls are cut stone. Flanking the arched, stone doorway, two windows admit light to the fishing house through diamond-figured, leaded glass panes. Within, the single room measures 15 feet square. Black and white marble squares pave its floor. A black marble-topped table occupied the center of the room and at one time painted panels of scenes on the lower end of the room, ornamented the walls. Amid classic magnificence the only human note can be found on the fireplace where the initials 'C.C.L.V.' record the famous friendship. On the doorway on the outside runs the inscription: 'Piscatoribus Sacrum.'

"Walton did not take his fishing straight. He mixed trout with a kind of philosophy and poetry. The 'Angler's Song' tells why he thinks fishing is superior to all other sports:

"Of recreation there is none So free as fishing is also. With all other pastimes do no less Than mind and body both possess: My hand alone my work can do, So I can fish and study, too."

"The most famous fisherman of them all was so unprofessional as to let his pole and line fish unattended while he sought shelter under a tree to talk with a pupil on Montaigne or worms. He also preferred worms to flies for catching trout!

"Izaak Walton was born in Stafford in 1538. Fish and live long early became his philosophy.

Lived in Turbulent Times. "We regard the span of Walton's life as one of the stormiest in England's history. The Pilgrims were sailing to New England to escape religious persecution when Walton at twenty-seven ran a hardware store in the desert of the Royalists by Cromwell in 1644 Walton retired to Stafford. All England struggled amidst the tumult of revolution but Izaak merely moved from the banks of the Thames to the banks of the Dove. The 'Compleat Angler's' soothing prose praising the beauty of an English field after a shower, explaining how to put a worm on a hook, and describing the excellence of the Episcopal faith; this dissertation, mid- as a poetic morning, first appeared in a little year when Cromwell proclaimed himself Lord Protector and England became a republic.

"No life, my honest Scholar, Walton has Piscator advise Venator, 'No life so happy and so pleasant as the life of a well-governed hunter; for when the hunter is swallowed up with business, and the statesman is prevented or contrived plots, then we sit on cowslip banks, hear birds sing, and possess ourselves in as much quietness as these silent, silver streams, which we now see glide so quietly by us. Indeed, my good Scholar, we may say of angling as Doctor Boteler said of strawberries, 'Doubtless and doubtless God never did, and so, if I might be a judge, God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.'"

"It is quite in keeping that Walton should have inscribed a tribute to the meadow lark which posterity treasures more than his 'observations on the eel.'"

"First, the lark," he wrote, "when she means to rejoice to cheer herself I think that bear her, she then earth, and sings as she ascends higher into the air; and having ended her heavenly employment, grows then mute and sad to think she must descend to the dull earth, which she could not touch but of necessity!"

VILLAGE PLANNING BIG FACTOR IN COMMUNITY LIFE

City planning as practical in metropolitan centers has its counterpart in the development of villages that serve as social centers for farmers and country people.

The automobile affords the farmer wider range of choice in selecting his recreation and in selling his products and buying supplies. Some of the elements of good physical make-up of towns and villages, according to Wayne C. Nason, of the Division of Farm Population and Rural Life of the Department of Agriculture, are convenient and pleasing exits and entrances, broad tree-lined streets, a common or village green as a civic center, park and playground space, sanitation, good architecture in private dwellings, as well as in public buildings, which should be conveniently located, and all set back from the streets and surrounded with ample lawns and clean and attractive borders.

Villages that do not minister to the needs of the farming communities are likely to complain of the drift to the cities and of ruinous competition. Villages that are attractive, as well as serviceable, also profit from the ever-increasing army of summer tourists.

Preventive planning, which foresees and prevents expensive mistakes in building, is recommended to village communities. As in the cities, rebuilding after a bad start may be expensive but cheaper in the long run. Exceptional new villages planned recently, with an eye to the future, include Mariemont, Ohio; Longview, Wash.; Finehurst, N. C.; and Palo Verde, Calif. Other villages are being built, either in large piece reconstruction work at one time or by adoption of long-term plans for replacement of undesirable buildings as they wear out.

The movement is country wide and supported by planning associations and boards in several States. A long list of towns and villages which have initiated planning practices includes such scattered communities as Weston, Mass.; Leroy, Ohio; Fayette City, N. C.; Cape Girardeau, Mo.; Post, Tex.; Pipestone, Minn.; Logan, Utah; and Durham and Patterson, Calif. Mr. Nason concludes that village planning is in its infancy. It represents not a waste but a saving of money in forestalling the need to spend great sums in the future for reconstruction and in providing for the economic, social, and esthetic welfare of the 20,000,000 people who live in villages or small towns and of the 30,000,000 farm people who use them.

The poultry industry of the United States is a billion dollar industry. In fact, according to Roy C. Potts, chief poultry marketing specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, it has passed well beyond that value and has become one of the leading agricultural industries of the country. Chicken egg production on farms is in the neighborhood of 2,000,000,000 dozen annually. This is a value of $600,000,000 or more. The number of poultry raised each year is approaching three-quarter of a billion with an approximate value of $50,000,000. These figures are based on the average farm production only and do not embrace the village production.
