MAKING FLOWERS BLOOM OUT OF SEASON AS A FAD

By tinkering with the sunlight that reaches certain plants it has been possible to force them to bloom out of season and earlier or later than their usual period. Horticulturists of the United States Department of Agriculture have proved this in several interesting experiments, and similar experiments are recommended to amateur flower fanciers as an enjoyable hobby. From experiments it appears that such plants as dahlias, African marigolds, poinsettias, cosmos, and late varieties of chrysanthemums do not blossom merely because they have reached the proper stage of maturity or because they have grown for a natural numof the increase in acre yields have seem to produce flowers because
