Health Talk

WRITTEN BY DR. THEODORE B. APPEL, SECRETARY OF HEALTH

"At the present time a wholesome frankness regarding fundamental biological subjects exists. Prudishness and false modesty have given way to a sensible viewpoint on these important topics," said Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health, today.

"Nevertheless with all the frankness now to be found in polite conversation, on the stage, in the magazines and in the movies, there yet strangely is a modesty that is most annoying to the medical profession. And it frequently results in dire trouble and often in death.

"It seems that people will discuss to the point of painfulness the ills of others, but just as soon as a condition arises in themselves that calls for a thorough physical examination, then is it not only not discussed, but sometimes everything is done by the victim to hide his trouble until such a time that pain and desperation make it impossible for him further to postpone a visit to the doctor's office. In many instances the progress of the disease has reached such an unfortunate stage that nothing can be done but prolong a doomed life.

"The main cause of conditions of this character is cancer. Cancer invades and conceals itself, but like all criminals finally manifests itself, sometimes painlessly, by means of tumors, persistent sores and unusual bleeding.

"In many cases of this character, had modesty been put in its proper place at the first sign of anything physically unusual, whether it was painful or not, the practiced eye of the physician would have diagnosed the ailment, and frequently would have been able to throttle it before it reached the hopeless stage, as in the early stages cancer is frequently curable.

"A certain amount of modesty is all right and even demanded by society, but to carry this trait into the field of criminal delusion is absurd and frequently is suicidal.

"Your physician is your confidant. Modesty, where disease or even a suspicion of a disease exists has no place in your relations with him. Give him the chance to discover your trouble promptly. To delay may mean your life."

"ELECTRICITY, THE MODERN HIRED MAN"

"The day when farmers will be able to lie in bed on Sunday morning and merely press a button to get most of their work done, seems to be approaching reality," says the universal farmer. "Modern inventions, chiefly those which find new uses for electricity on the farm, while they may not bring about this millennium will greatly lighten farm work.

"Nowdays it is practical, where rural transmission lines bring electricity to the farm, to milk the cows, separate the cream, grind and mix the feed, bale and dry the hay, clip and curry the animals, light the farm buildings, operate machinery in the repair shop, and perform many other jobs by electricity that formerly took time and hard work. Already many up-to-date farmers get along without a hired man because of these modern conveniences.

"Uses of electricity in the farm home seem to have no limit. Vacuum cleaners, sewing machines, and many other devices, simplify what formerly were laborious tasks for the farm woman. Lighting, ventilating and cooking systems, as well as water supplies, can all be "hooked" on to the magic power from the button on the wall.

Electricity is doing for the farm what it has done for the factory and the modern home—performing better work at less cost, with immeasurably increased efficiency, and without the back-breaking labor of the past.

THE RAILROADS AID GENERAL PROSPERITY

Last year the railroads of the United States spent $1,396,000,000 for materials and supplies and $772,000,000 for new equipment and improvements. This tremendous total is the equivalent of $76.80 for every family in the country.

Railroad purchases aid all businesses and help to support workers in all lines. When, in 1927, they spent $439,000,000 for coal alone, they were providing every fourth dollar earned by coal miners. They paid one-fourth of all wages in the lumber industry by spending $176,000,000 for forest products. Their needs in iron and steel furnished one-fifth of the income of employees in that industry.

Thus do the railroads make a tremendous contribution to the general prosperity and living standards of the United States. A year of railroad progress and expansion means a year of general progress. A year of serious curtailment of railroad activities, on the other hand, would have a depressing effect on many basic industries which employ millions of wage-earners.

This is the danger that arises when railroad earnings are insufficient to realize an adequate income on the investment involved. For a number of years past they have been struggling to progress in spite of poor returns and they have succeeded. They have raised efficiency, and placed themselves on a new high economic level.

This, unfortunately, cannot continue indefinitely under present conditions. Regulating bodies use more and more arbitrary power; railroad income continues to be much less than the "Fair Return" permitted by the government. The result, unless a change of policy intervenes, will be railroad retrenchment and retrogression.

Railroad curtailments mean general industrial curtailment.

LEADERS SET EXAMPLE

"An example of public spirit which might well be emulated by other industrial leaders was shown recently by five citizens of Alabama in connection with a movement for advertising the resources of the state," says the Tonasket, Washington, Times.

"In pursuance of an act of the legislature an Industrial Commission was appointed by Governor Graves, with an appropriation of $100,000 for a four years' advertising campaign. Deeming this inadequate, the five commissioners, who serve without salary and pay their own expenses, personally donated $20,000 each, or a total of $100,000 to the fund, duplicating the amount furnished by the state.

"Their action is good evidence that the governor made no mistake in selecting the personnel of the commission, which is composed of Thomas W. Martin, President of the Alabama Power Company; George T. Crawford, President of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company; Theodore Swann, Lindley Morton and Benjamin Russell, capitalists.

"In every state captains of industry are performing similar services for their communities, and it might be well for the public to make note of the fact occasionally and give credit where it is due. Such men do more for the up-building of the country than the soap-box orators in and out of Congress who would tear down the business structure which has been erected through the efforts of able and industrious citizens."

ROAD NEARLY COMPLETED TO BAINBRIDGE

About three miles of the State route number 241, from Elizabethtown to Bainbridge, is nearly completed.

Along this new stretch of road extending from Root's School House in West Donegal township, to a point below Shenk's Schoolhouse, several sharp curves have been improved, and the road widened at various sections.

At a point below Good's Church a large standard concrete bridge was constructed to replace a former inadequate span, with a width of about 30 feet.

The construction of a temporary bridge near the farm of Harry J. Gish just outside of Elizabethtown, was made this week.

Work will probably be finished within the next several weeks.
