Proper Treatment Brings Profits
Tree planting on idle land and wood-lot thinning of second growth timber go hand in hand. Both practices aid in the development of the greatest possible income and satisfaction from that part of the farm on which they are applied and which now is yielding little or no income.

Prepare Honey for Exhibit
Beekeepers who plan to exhibit honey at the State Farm Products Show in Harrisburg this month are urged to give their produce good preparation so the display will arrive at the state capital in good condition for exhibition.

WEEKLY LETTER WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE BULLETIN BY DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Night Sweats: I have recently had a number of inquiries regarding a cure for "night sweats," and have promised that I would give a lecture on the subject.

One of the hard things is to explain the cause of such a thing as a night sweat without going into a scientific discussion, because the average person, and to many physicians, there is no apparent cause, and hence they doctor the disease by internal medication and let the leakage go on.

Now, if, as I told you, eighty percent of the body is water, then He who created this wonderful structure or case called the skin, knew that so much water was necessary to the proper life and health of the being in folded within that skin, and it was so constructed that when a certain degree of heat exists outside the body the nerves controlling the involuntary muscles surrounding the mouths or pores of the skin would cause them to open and a portion of the water is allowed to come out and cool the surface.

On the other hand, when the body is placed in a certain degree of cold the nerves controlling these openings cause the muscles to contract, and the moisture is retained, the skin remains cold and the cold is not so penetrable. Any one can, therefore, readily understand why great activity which causes the fires within the body can, therefore, readily understand why great activity which causes the fires within the body to burn more rapidly, at the same time starts the sweat out all over the body, or why the heat of a Turkish or other sweat bath causes profuse perspiration, but it does not explain why it is that a man or woman in great mental or physical agony will sweat drops of water standing or lying perfectly still and in the cold. All of this, too I could explain to you, but time and space will not permit. I must take facts as I find them and teach you how to deal with conditions and not theories.

When the entire system has been weakened, no matter whether it is the dread disease called consumption, by worry, by overwork, or any other cause, the nerves controlling these little pores or mouths lose strength, and the muscles themselves grow weak and fatulous. During the waking hours, while the whole body is active, there is seldom any trouble from excessive leakage, but sleep resembles death in many respects, and the weakened nerves and tired muscles relax, letting a portion of the precious vitality escape in night sweats.

All, one would think, may easily understand the matter in hand so far. In whatever way it is done, we must in such a case restore vitality and consequent activity to these organs in the skin when untimely and unnatural sweatings come on. This can be done in a very direct and inexpensive way. Take a tablespoonful of cayenne pepper, a pint of good white wine vinegar; mix these together and pour on a pint of boiling water. Let it boil down one-half, strain out the pepper, and with this liquid, sponge the patient at bedtime all over the body from head to foot, as gently as possible, but so the liquid gets really through the sweatiness and effects the skin. A small sponge or bit of soft rag will do very well for this purpose. The sponging may be done under the bed clothes so as to give the least possible disturbance or fatigue to the patient.

I have seen the night sweats disappear on a single application of this remedy, but it is well to continue it for three or four evenings, even when the cure is as rapid as this and to repeat it to five or six, if the relaxation of the skin is not sooner removed. Even if the case is one of the greatest weakness, this application will greatly refresh, and if at all carefully done will cause not the slightest inconvenience.

If it can be more easily procured, a gill of acetic acid will do for the vinegar—I might say that it will do better than any vinegar which, as a rule, one can purchase, but good ordinary white or cider vinegar will do.

Weeds Harbor Red Spider

The red spider is not particular about his menu, as he may satisfy his appetite on 183 different kinds of plants, among them cotton, which he sometimes damages to the extent of $2,000,000 a year. Prevention in winter is much better than cure in summer, as great expenditure of time, labor, and materials is necessary to control the pests after they get into the cotton fields. Most of the red spiders pass the winter on wild plants, and pokeweed, Jerusalem oak, jimson weed, wild blackberry, wild geranium, and other weeds in and around cotton fields should be destroyed now. Each female spider killed now means some 300,000,000 potential offspring less next summer. Some cultivated plants, particularly the violet, also act as hosts to the red spider, and many cases of cotton infestation have been traced to near-by door-yards. This pest, which is not really a spider but a mite, often attacks plants unnoticed, owing to its minute size and habit of living on the undersides of leaves, and the injury is likely to be mistaken for a "rust" disease.
