CENTRAL CHIMNEY HELPS COMFORT, CUTS FIRE HAZARD

In Colonial days it was a custom to build the chimney in the center of the home so that it would give off radiant heat to all the rooms surrounding it. The Holland Institute of Thermology of Holland, Mich., states that this still is good practice for the same reason, but there are more important reasons why the chimney should be enclosed rather than built as part of an outside wall.

All building materials expand and contract more or less when subjected to changes of temperature. Often a chimney that is part of an outside wall is cracked by the different expansion and contraction caused by the cold outdoors air on one side of it and the hot gases on the inside. These defects increase danger of fires, and interfere with the draft so that the heating plants set up an excessive amount of fuel and, even then, the home comfortable.

Many householders planning to build new homes or remodel those they now occupy assume it is necessary to put expensive flues inside the chimneys if those flues are made of ordinary fireclay instead of ordinary clay and if they are installed so that the joints remain absolutely tight and perfectly smooth, they will be worth while.

But investigation of thousands of chimney complaints has proved that too often the liners are of ordinary clay so the intense heat of the flue gases breaks them more readily than they could break plain bricks, or they are mortared together so poorly that their joints develop air pockets or points of friction.

Building experts agree that brick is the best material for chimneys. Where there are more flues than one in the chimney, the best practice is to separate them with a full continuous course of bricks set edgewise.

Spring Burning
Use care while burning brush! Each year this warning is sounded by the Game Commission. To have game you must have cover! When you clear all your fence corners of brush you force the rabbits, quail, and pheasants to find new homes or perhaps you even destroy some already made. If you burn brush near forest lands there is always the danger of forest fires unless you are ever careful. Whatever forests are devastated, the loss is yours just as much as anyone else's and therefore you should be doubly careful.

New Motion Pictures
The former three-reel series of motion pictures entitled "Wild Life Conservation in Pennsylvania" has been considerably revised and now includes four parts. In this picture is depicted all the activities of the Game Commission both at Harrisburg and in the field. Part three is devoted to the bird life of the State. Anyone who doesn't get a kick out of seeing this set of pictures is indeed hard to please. Sportsmen's associations, schools, colleges, service clubs, etc., may have the opportunity of seeing the pictures if they make such request to this office in writing.

Purchasing Quail
It will be interesting to the sportsmen to learn that while our original order for quail from Mexico could not be supplied due to the heaviest drought in that section for twenty years, 5,000 birds were finally secured from Texas and the shipments have already started.

Game Farms
Rapid progress is being made on both the John S. Fisher Game Farm in Montgomery County and the C. G. Gordan Farm in Lawrence county. The Jordan Farm is virtually complete and at present there is a group of birds numbering approximately 1,200 to be used as breeding stock on hand there. A large hatch of eggs is expected this season. Work on the John S. Fisher Farm has been somewhat retarded due to necessary repairs to buildings, etc.

Personals
Many sportsmen and others will be glad to learn that Harry Van-Cleve, Trapping Instructor, has recovered admirably from the serious injuries he received when he fell into the Buffalo Pen at the Cambria County Fair last August. Also, Dr. Sutton, Chief of the Bureau of Research and Information, is convalescing rapidly from his injuries received last week when he fell fifty feet from a cliff while observing the nest of a raven in Clinton County.

MONEY ENOUGH SAYS MR. LEWIS

Sees Tremendous Balance
State Treasurer Lewis went further in his attack on the increased gasoline impost by declaring that if the increased license fees, as incorporated in the revised motor code, were adopted the balance on hand in funds of the State Highway Department at the end of the next biennium would be $15,174,790.

Photostatic copies of his estimates were furnished members of the committee by the State Treasurer so that there could be no dispute as to the exact amounts he outlined.

Until Monday morning, the State Treasurer declared, the Highway Department had expended for this biennium $105,226,764, exclusive of $1,987,712 for the new Highway Department office building, and this latter sum will be returned to the highway funds.

This expenditure, he explained, was made during a period of "peak construction."
Expenditures for this biennium previously had been estimated at $125,028,932 by the department, which meant that a surplus of $14,801,940 should be on hand at the close of the biennium, June 1, next.

"Accept every point in the House program," Lewis told the committee, "for you can do it, carry on peak construction, avoid additional taxation and still have plenty of money left to take care of department errors."

Time to Investigate
Lewis hinted the department's estimates might be $9,000,000 off.

"I have just been shown one place," he said, "where they are $14,000,000 off. If they are $9,000,000 off at another place then I think it is time for the Legislature to investigate the actual truth."

He invited members of the committee to inspect the books of the Treasury, and reminded them that that was one department where expenditures were accurately checked.

Hot Or Cold

MONEY ENOUGH SAYS MR. LEWIS

How corned beef that jiggs so loves got its name? Well, the story goes that corned beef used to be preserved by dry-salting—sprinkled with "corns" of salt (i.e., coarse grains of salt) instead of being preserved in brine. As dry-salting went out of use, the term "cornering" came to signify bringing.

Today corned beef is still the same delicious, tender meat it has always been, and served hot or cold it's always toothsome and sustaining. The most convenient form in which to get it is in cans, since you can always have it on hand in this way ready for instant use. Mixed with diced potatoes and fried, heated with sauerkraut or used as a sandwich filling, corned beef is in a class by itself, but there are still other ways to prepare it.

Patties for Parties
Or corned beef patties: mix one and one-half cups chopped corned beef, three-fourths cup bread crumbs, one finely chopped green pepper and one-half minced onion. Beat two eggs slightly and add to the meat mixture. Mold in form of patties and brown in a frying pan in bacon fat. Serve with hot tomato soup just as it comes from the can as a sauce and garnish with rings of green pepper.

Cranberries All the Year

CRANBERRIES are not simply an autumn food which can be bought only at Thanksgiving time. To be sure, fresh cranberries are limited in point of time, but did you know that cranberries are commercially canned as jelly or sauce, so you can have them any time of the year? Cranberry jelly, just as it comes from the can, is a real convenience ready to use with game or fowl. Cranberries in either of these forms save the housewife from all the drudgery of picking over and washing them, boiling them, and, for the jelly, rubbing them through a sieve.

Tart, but Sweet
The cranberry is one of the few fruits which has a fresh, delicious flavor and yet has a suggestion of tartness about it which makes it welcome in desserts and salads which might otherwise be too sweet. Cranberry ice, molded cranberry salad and many other cranberry dishes may be made. Here is the way to make:
Cranberry Jelly Salad: Heat one can of cranberry jelly with one-half cup orange juice and two tablespoons lemon juice. Soak four teaspoons of gelatin in two tablespoons cold water and then dissolve in the hot, melted cranberry. Strain and cool. Add one-fourth cup diced celery and one-fourth cup chopped nuts when beginning to stiffen. Pour into molds wet with cold water, and chill. Turn out and serve with stuffed with cream cheese.
