Order Forest Trees Now

Speaking of the thousands of forest trees planted last spring, forestry specialists of the Pennsylvania State College call attention to the absolute necessity of ordering trees early for planting next spring. Your county agent can help you decide what type of trees are suitable for your conditions. He can also get you an application blank for trees to be ordered from the State Department of Forests and Waters.

Protect Orchard Trees

Much of the injury to fruit trees from rabbits and mice can be prevented by protecting the trees before the snow comes. The county agent can tell what measures to employ.

Use Barrel for Storage

A large barrel, buried in a horizontal position in side of a bank, makes a convenient place to store small amounts of root crops and cabbage. Soil and straw or leaves are used for covering the barrel. The barrel head makes a convenient door for this storage pit.

Improve the Woodlot

This is just the time to lay plans for woodlot thinning work during the fall and winter. Let that riot of autumn colors hereafter cover tall, straight, well-crowned, sound trees of good growth and the useful kinds instead of "just trees."

When it's job printing you need, anything from a card to a book, we are at your service.

Train Foals Now

The education of the foal should not be postponed until it is desired to break him as a 3-year-old. Horse specialists of State College recommend teaching subordination early to prevent the foal from becoming willful or headstrong. A foal responds quickly to kind and patient treatment supplied early.

Kill Borers This Fall

Shredding all corn or stover not ensiled helps to control the European corn borer. Do not let any of the insects survive.

DYNAMITE USED BY PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS IN "GOOD FARMKEEPING"

Dynamite makes a ditch in less than a second's time. Above—Neighboring farmers turn out in force when blasting is done.

Draining a marsh begins in but a few minutes after the explosive has blasted the ditch.

THE Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is committed to the idea that there is a plus in farming which stands for, in addition to profitable production, "good farmkeeping." Also, interest in farmkeeping is fostered on a national scale by the American Farm Bureau Federation from its headquarters at Chicago. It is believed that the tidy farm is both an evidence of prosperity and a very helpful factor in attaining that desired end.

A typical instance of the attitude of Pennsylvania farmers in regard to farmkeeping is provided by S. M. Smedley, Jr., of Delaware county, whose policy is to do at least one thing each year to permanently improve his farm. Recently he had 530 feet of ditching done to correct the flow of a stream for the purpose of draining a piece of swampy land which he said had always been an eyesore.

Arrangements for the blasting of the ditch with dynamite were made through H. O. Wilcox, the county agent, who availed himself of the services of Larry F. Livingston, Director of the Agricultural Extension Section of the du Pont Company. Assisting in what developed into a demonstration for the farmers of the section was John R. Haswell, Extension Agricultural Engineer of the Pennsylvania State College. Thirty-five of Mr. Smedley's neighbors witnessed the demonstration. In doing the blasting a stick of dynamite was used in each of a single row of holes.

Ditch 450 Feet Long

William Vandegrift, county agent for Chester county, neglects no opportunity to encourage good farmkeeping. In announcing a demonstration on the Webster Styer farm, two miles west of Knaerstown on the Ridge road, Mr. Vandegrift stated: "Much of our wet land can be drained by the open ditch method. It is the purpose of this meeting to demonstrate how dynamite can be used effectively and economically in blasting ditches in meadows and elsewhere on the farm." An interesting description of the work at the Styer farm was given by Mr. Livingston, who said: "The ditch we blasted was 450 feet long. Its course encountered the worst conditions I have ever seen. That was due to the presence of a six-inch layer of muck beneath which were great quantities of stone ranging from eight inches to 18 inches in diameter. Instead of the gravel which so often is found. The ground was wet, therefore, we used the propagation method whereby the detonation of an initial charge serves to explode the dynamite in the other holes in a row. In doing the job, one stick of dynamite was placed in each hole at a spacing of 16 inches."

The ditch was made to drain ten acres of land, that owing to its swampy character, was practically worthless.

Another Series of Ditches

That the cleaning up and otherwise improving of farms is becoming quite general in Pennsylvania is apparent from the fact that work was done also in Indiana county, one of the western tier of counties. A series of demonstrations were conducted in that section during the spring by Fred P. Weber, of the field staff of the du Pont Agricultural Extension Section. Mr. Weber is a graduate of the Michigan State College and is widely known for the land clearing he did in the Middle West and elsewhere.

One of the Indiana county demonstrations was given on the Graff farm, near Black Lick. Describing this work, Mr. Weber said: "The purpose of this ditch was to straighten the course of a creek that ran through the Graff farm. There was a very good flow of water through the old creek and it assisted the propagation of the dynamite. Four different types of soil were encountered but the moisture which was present for the greater part of the work enabled us to space the dynamite at 18 inches, and, in some cases, 20 inches apart. The ditch to be blown had to be large enough to carry a great deal of water; therefore, two sticks were placed in each hole. When blown, the ditch had a ten-foot top width, tapering to six feet at the bottom, and was five feet deep."

Another interesting demonstration was witnessed by farmers of Indiana county at the farm of William Goss, outside of Hillsdale. Dynamite was used in blasting a ditch for the purpose of draining a swamp that overflowed a road in rainy seasons. There was a small creek leading from the swamp, which was straightened so that the water could drain from the wet spot more readily. Roots and dead trees were scattered along the entire course of the projected ditch. While the many obstructions added to the difficulties of blasting the ditch, the explosive made quick work of the job.

Rather unusual conditions were met with on Harry Couch's farm, in the vicinity of Fairwood. "The ditch made in this case," said Mr. Weber, "was of the wide and shallow type, because of the hardpan which was so close to the surface." Blasting was done for an approximate distance of 200 yards.

For Well-Kept Farms

Keen interest was shown by neighboring farmers in the blasting of a ditch 600 feet long on the property of John Ortnor, three miles east of the town of Indiana.

According to Mr. Weber, "the idea of the ditch was to drain surrounding land, which was dotted with springs. There was but little flow of water over a very heavy type of soil with a three-inch layer of sand and gravel at the surface. At the mouth of the ditch there was a great deal more sand and gravel, necessitating the placing of sticks of dynamite at a 12-inch spacing. The remainder of the hole spacing was 18 inches, and propagation was successful."

OWL-LAFFS

O. W. L. (On With Laughs)

I'm not going to tell you which doctor it was but here's one happened recently. One of our professional M. D.'s gave a man a few pills for a pain and told him to take two about fifteen minutes before he felt the pain coming on.

A Marietta street woman told one of our reporters that one of the many things she admired about her mother was that she's outspoken. Our reporter said: "Not by any one I know."

A young chap from Mount Joy township was in town Saturday night and while in conversation with him, I said: "Where is your ethics?" He said: "I swapped it to Enos Rohrer on a Hudson."

Believe me, Rohrer isn't going to get that advertising for nothing. If he doesn't come across, why the next time his cat has kittens, I hope they're all ducks.

A man at Donegal Springs told his neighbor he had a freak at his house. He said it was a two-legged calf. The neighbor replied: "Yes, I know. He came over to see my daughter last night."

Statistics show that 50 per cent of the married people in America are women. Only 20 per cent are men. The other 20 per cent wear knickers.

A man on East Donegal street was transplanting flowers and bruised his thumb with the spade. He was letting off a little excess steam when his wife said: "Oh, G— and you always called a spade a spade."

"How did you get that black eye, Joe?" "I slipped and fell on my back." "But your face isn't your back." "No, neither was the fellow who struck me."

One of our young chaps said he had the dumbest girl Sunday night he ever met. She asked him how electric light poles grew in such straight lines.

Christ Mamma said he and another auto salesman were trying to sell a Scotchman a car. Christ said he made the deal because he made the fellow believe the clutch was thrown in.

Thru that deal Christ said he learned why Scotchmen wear kilts. It's so they don't have to get them pressed.

Guess that's the reason women wear such short skirts—they never get baggy in the knee.

Of all the liars, here's a guy must be considered. He said he attended a dance hall that was so crowded that when one lady fainted she danced around the floor four times before she fell.

Some fellow asked Christ Walters who started the Rotary Club and he said he didn't know exactly but he knew that Daniel started the Lion's Club.

At a recent Rotary meeting one of the table waitresses asked Doc Snyder if he wanted pie. Doc said: "Is it essential?" Waitress replied: "No, it's pumpkin."

Just reminds me a customer went to Stumpff's and asked for Indian fried potatoes. The waiter said: "You mean French fried, don't you?"

"Nope, I mean Indian," said the customer. "Scalloped."

Heard one fellow say to another: "I'll give you a good wallop." "Don't bother," said the other. "I wouldn't know how to eat it anyway."

A man went to Ellwood Gillums and asked him to shave the price on a certain article. Ellwood said: "My dear man, this is a store, not a barber shop."

A lady here says she just became engaged to an Irishman. I said: "Oh! Really." She said: "No. O'Reilly." A WISE OWL

MANY FARM WOMEN ARE ENTERTAINED

Mrs. B. F. Hoffman, of Locust Grove, entertained at a luncheon at her cottage, Chalet-Hoffman, at Mt. Gretna, members and friends of the Farm Women's society, No. 8. An illustrated lecture on Landscape Gardening was given with the assistance of Miss Pauline Garber and Abner Risser.

INVESTS $1250 FOR SANCTUARY FOR BIRDS

So that birds can have a place to find food during the winter when vegetation is barren and snow is on the ground, Mrs. Agnes M. Wierman, York, has purchased five acres of land at $250 an acre from Harry L. Perry, near the York Water Company's impounding dam along the Susquehanna Trail, upon which she will plant berry plants to produce sprigs and berries.
