The Cod Leaves Boston

"The land of the sacred cod" used to mean only Boston, but with the developments in the fish industry there is no longer just how the phrase may soon apply. One of the largest factors in supplying codfish to inlanders has been the recent canning, as well as salting, of the fish. Canned codfish is ready to cook just as salmon or tuna is ready for use.

Fishes or Cakes

Even canned codfish is put up in several ways. One is in flakes, large, toothsome flakes which may be creamed, made into hash, timbales, and used with omelets, in salads or in other ways. It saves a lot of time not to have to soak dried codfish in making cakes or cream sauce for baked potatoes, for instance, but to use these flakes or canned codfish instead.

Another variety of codfish is of such a character that it can be easily shaped with the hands, and, when fried in deep fat, makes crusty, tender balls; or it may be turned out in the can, sliced and sauted. Codfish hash is also put up in cans. Canned codfish is not expensive and is a welcome addition to any meal in the day.

To make fish flake timbales, add one-fourth cup sifted bread crumbs, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, two well-beaten eggs and one and one-half cups milk to a can of fish flakes. Mix well and turn into buttered timbale molds or patty pans. Stand these in a pan of boiling water reaching nearly to the top. Bake until firm. The water should barely be simmering. Unfold timbales onto a hot platter; garnish with white sauce and sliced, hard-cooked eggs.

MADE 2000 TESTS OF SEED SAMPLES

Other farmers in the community without the analysis required by law. This practice, in addition to causing possible loss to neighbors by increasing the prevalence of noxious weeds, makes the farmer liable to a fine of $200.

All seedsmen and farmers who are planning to have samples of their seed analyzed during the coming spring are urged by E. M. Dress, botanist in charge of the seed testing samples as early as possible. Waiting until seeding time results in the seed laboratory being flooded with samples, some of which have to be returned without a test.

As a result of the seed analyses made during the past year, farmers are reminded that the best way for them to safeguard their own interests is to buy their supply of seed for sowing next spring from reliable seed dealers within the Commonwealth. When buying seed, the farmer should see that the seed bag carries a tag or label containing the information regarding quality and purity, as required by law.

The law states that the tag carry the following information:

MAYTOWN

Class of 1904 Held a Very Successful Reunion Here

Henry Peck of East Syracuse, New York, visited friends in town. Merchant J. A. Dehoff, who was quite ill, is improved at this writing.

Hershey; exercise by entire group of little tots, gathered around the fire place; recitation, by the choir; exercise by four Esther Rice; exercise, three girls; boys; recitation, Vincent Kahle; remarks, by superintendent of the Sunday school; musical recitation, Elsie Sherer; exercise, by four girls vocal duet, by Mary Elizabeth Horst and Bertha Mease; exercise, by a group of girls; duet, by Esther Miller and Betty Baker; recitation, by Jack Trayer; song by the choir.

Miss Evelyn A. Geiss, of Salunga, teacher of piano, gave a musical party in the East Hempfield township high school auditorium, Landisville, Saturday evening. It was under the direction of Miss Ryda B. Beck, a representative of the Art Publication Society, of St. Louis, Missouri, who is also a graduate of the New York Conservatory of Music and Miss Lois Wilson, a guest teacher from Rochester, N. Y. Miss Beck gave a short address on the importance of proper musical training for children and the importance of selecting a competent teacher for that training. Miss Wilson, with a number of Miss Geiss's pupils, gave a class demonstration. The class opened with a song "Carmenita," followed by drills in sight-reading, memory work, ear training and rhythm. A rhythmic orchestra was an added feature. Prizes were awarded to Mary Greider and Anna Ruth Weidle, both of Landisville. About fifty guests were present.
