EDITORIAL

If you want to get the real keynote of a community, find out what sort of a home it is in which the young folks gather most readily.

SMILE

It costs nothing, but creates much. It enriches those who receive, without impoverishing those who give. It happens in a flash and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever. None are so rich that they can get along without it, and none are so poor but are richer for its benefits.

ITS THE TRUTH

A woman may be blessed with a form as divine as that reputed to have been possessed by Venus, but if she has a mug like Maggie's, men will pass her by. On the other hand she may have a face as beautiful as an artist's dream, and a corn-fed form, and still not register very high. Still women persist in saying men are not close observers.

WHOM CAN WE TRUST

A rigid investigation has disclosed the facts that in Philadelphia three former Prohibition agents, four Penna. R. R. men and officers of a legal Distilling Co. were crooked. They diverted 115,000 gallons of alcohol valued at a million dollars, into bootleg channels. They falsified records and "winked" at twenty-three solid carloads of liquor.
From the class of men who are involved in many of our country's bootleg transactions, it is rather difficult to get men who can turn a deaf ear on a big money bribe nowadays.
Many of our best men have gone wrong thru temptation where considerable money was involved. They can't say no.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Have you ever thought of Classified Ads as having relationship to the business of living? It really does mean a lot as each classified section tells a story, vividly human. A lost dog, a vacant chair, a used automobile, a house for sale. Each separate listing may have its own hidden story—perhaps grief and sadness or joy and laughter.
The commercial side is interesting, too. It is a true saying that "anything can be bought or sold thru a properly worded advertisement." Merchants are aware of this fact because they use the classified columns for help wanted or other miscellaneous needs; sometimes, often in fact, to dispose of something that they could introduce to the public thru no better source. Each individual purchaser could not be reached in so short a time by many other methods at so little cost.

WHY LINCOLN WAS GREAT

Calvin Coolidge while President of the United States, in an address, told why he thought Lincoln was a great man. "Lincoln," he said, "was the commander-in-chief of the greatest armies the world has ever seen. They were victorious. Yet we do not look on him as a conqueror."
"He directed the raising and spending of vast sums of money. Yet we do not think of him as a financier."

"The course which he followed cost many lives and desolated much territory. Yet we think of him, not as a destroyer, but as a restorer."
Mr. Coolidge then gives the reason why he thinks Lincoln was great and in doing so he expresses a thought that should be broadcast thru the world today. He said: "To me the greatest of Lincoln consisted very largely of a vision by which he saw more clearly than the men of his time the moral relationship of things. His great achievement lay in the bringing of the different elements of his country into a more truly moral relationship."
That undoubtedly was the Great Emancipator's contribution to his time, and his work needs to be carried on in the world today—not by a single great individual but by many, yes, by a multitude of people, who see and understand what is right in human relations and who have the courage to put that understanding into practical effect in everyday affairs.

PHENOMENAL GAIN IN TRUST SERVICES

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President, American Bankers Association

So phenomenal has been the increase of trust business that statisticians are unable to keep a true record of its advancement. There are now something like 2,500 active trust departments in banks in America, while in 1900 only 165 active trust departments had been established. In becoming the custodians of the property of others, bankers as John G. Lonsdale has been fittingly described as one of the "most exalted human relationships ever created by law." They become at once a big brother, a big sister, an advisor, or a confessor, sworn so to conduct themselves that clients will be won to them by their ability and integrity. Thousands of little children have received an education and have been started off right in life through the trust department's safe keeping and guidance of the family estate, numberless widows have been protected from merciless stock swindlers, many thousands of business men have been relieved of troublesome details in the conduct of their business through the creation of a living trust and still others have safeguarded their business enterprises through life insurance trusts.

The favorable reaction of the public toward trust department service is not accidental. It may be traced jointly to the growing intelligence of the American people in financial affairs and to advertising to the world at large the merits of trust services. Advertising used in a sensible, judicious way is necessary, a power that has accomplished much good for humanity. Among the detailed services rendered by a trust department the one that seems to be winning favor the fastest is the life insurance trust. Life insurance is the quickest known way of creating an estate. In reality it affords the possessor the opportunity of setting up a positive monetary safeguard for his family and then paying for it on the installment plan.

A married man is not fair to his family if he fails to carry life insurance. I would say to the young man, "Buy insurance before you buy the ring," and to the young woman I would say, "Marry no man so thoughtless as to scoff at life insurance."
