GROWERS TOLD TO PACK TOBACCO

(From Page One) what's the use of waiting? A number of farmers should make arrangements now to pack their crops and have the leaf free and ready for market.

"If you do this it is still your tobacco and if it enhances in value you will share in the increased return. You will find it the easiest thing in the world to go to your bank and, using the cashed tobacco as collateral, get all the money you need for April first requirements.

"Don't try to pack individually, or keep it in your cellars or pack in mixed cases. Go together with your neighbors, pack a dozen of crops with a good warehouseman into three different grades according to quality and using new cases. Cooperative organizations charge two cents for packing but a dozen men could probably combine their crops at a packing charge of one and a fourth cents.

"The good red ripe tobacco will be the first picked up when the big buying comes but don't be afraid of raising too much good quality leaf."

President Lewis C. Creamer who had charge of the meeting, in pointing out the successful marketing of milk cooperatively in this county, declared "we should start a movement today by taking steps toward marketing our tobacco."

Growers holding good crops should not hesitate to be among the last to sell, according to R. L. Kimbrough, who reported an upward trend of better business throughout the nation, during the last 30 days, citing increased steel output, more employment and a ten billion dollar building construction program as reasons why the crop should move soon at good prices.

"Grown under similar conditions as the 1914 crop which sold for 30 to 40 cents in cases, the 1929 crop already in bulk is just as desirable and there is less old tobacco on hand despite reports to the contrary," he concluded.

Mr. Baker also declared that the present crop now in bulk has a "wonderful sweat, a good aroma and fair burn."

The growers were also advised not to insist on a top notch price for a common crop, and that there are indications of getting back to the old method of buying.

Twenty-three new members were enrolled in the association.

Choose Right Fertilizer

Commercial fertilizer for the garden should be suited to the particular needs of the soil. On light to medium soils, where only a small amount of manure has been applied, a good fertilizer is one analyzing about 5 per cent nitrogen, 10 per cent phosphorus, and 5 per cent potash. On medium to heavy soils, with a heavy application of manure, a fertilizer containing about 4 per cent nitrogen, 12 per cent phosphorus, and 4 per cent potash generally is the most profitable.
