EDITORIAL

It won't help the world's mortality statistics much to scrap mortalities and make automobiles out of them.

It seems staggering at first sight, but it is a fact that in the American census now being taken, Col. Lindbergh, Rudy Valley, Babe Ruth, and Al Capone will only count as one each.

197,500

Lancaster county, according to Census Supervisor Horace Kennedy, has one hundred and ninety seven thousand, five hundred persons.

This is a fine, substantial growth, and the best part about it is that the city, the boroughs and the townships have grown in about equal proportions.

ANNUAL LAMENT

In the good old summertime, in the good old summertime—and the annual lament of the same fellow who ached and ached over cold weather last winter is due.

Of what difference the weather so long as you are busied in gainful occupation, your mind alert with the possibilities of the day.

There won't be time to discuss such a thing as the weather.

Yep, going to be hot, hot from now thru September. See what you can do about it with a program of work that will require all your time for thinking of work and not the weather.

PLAYING IN STREETS

The condition of many of our streets, now that the warm weather and the long summer school holidays have come, inviting children to play and motorists to drive, is intolerable.

The efforts which have been made to improve conditions do not seem to have met with any marked degree of success; in spite of the attempt to keep children off the streets and directing them to supervised playgrounds, in many localities the driver has to thread his way thru throngs of youngsters, who claim the street for themselves and apparently regard all forms of traffic as an intrusion.

RECOGNITION FOR THE GRADUATES

The young people who are graduating from schools and colleges are entitled to words of praise from the community. They have done something for the community, in fitting themselves to take a responsible part in the duties of citizenship.

They have had many incitements to waste their time during these years of study. The fact that they have won these diplomas proves that they have resisted many temptations to idleness and dissipation, and our people have good reason for commending their effort, which works for the public good.

LOCAL CANDIDATE VERY WEAK

At the polls here last Tuesday, the voters of Mount Joy gave the local man, Thomas J. Brown, who is a candidate for the Legislature, very little encouragement. There were no politicians out electioneering against the local aspirant and even at that he only received 274 votes in the borough. Grundy polled 324 and Shannon, 343.

Evidently the people here have had enough Brown in the Legislature and a large number of them are willing to vote for almost any one except the local candidate.

In the eyes of many, Brown is a dead one politically in Mount Joy. Ever since the Bulletin exposed local School Board affairs of many years ago (when he was a member) Brown's political prestige was quite frail. This was evidenced by the neat political trimming handed him by the voters here when he was a candidate for re-election to the School Board at that time.

That was the last heard of Brown politically until he was slated by the county Republican organization several years ago and naturally elected.

Whether or not he should be re-elected we will leave the voters to decide. Before casting your ballot, however, it would be well to try and learn what Brown has done for the people of this district all the years he was a member of the Legislature.

When it gets nearer election time we will try and publish his activities in the Harrisburg Record.

POCKET TRANSMITTER IS NOVEL 'BY-PRODUCT' OF BELL SCIENTISTS

This and Other New Devices Demonstrated in Penna. by Sergius P. Grace

Scientists in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc., New York, where virtually every invention affecting the art of telephony is originated and developed, have perfected two new devices that seem destined to play important parts in the future of the communications industry.

These new developments are a miniature transmitter and an automatic telephone call announcer. Both devices have been exhibited and demonstrated before large audiences in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia by Sergius P. Grace, assistant vice president of the Laboratories, whose addresses in both cities were heard by thousands of persons anxious to obtain first hand knowledge on the development of the telephone industry.

During the last year, Mr. Grace also presented demonstrations and lectures in Bethlehem and Harrisburg, and in each instance he was greeted by enthusiastic audiences, who were amazed by the scientific demonstrations he performed with equipment that is in use daily throughout the Bell System.

The miniature transmitter, which was designed for use in connection with public address amplification systems and for radio broadcasting, is so small that it can be placed in a man's vest pocket.

During the lectures, Mr. Grace had the device attached to large loud speakers, which carried his voice clearly to every part of the auditoriums.

The tiny transmitter amplifier is so sensitive that it picks up in proper balance, vibrations from the chest of the speaker and acoustic vibrations in the air, which results in speech being reproduced with great naturalness.

The automatic call announcer is one of the Laboratories' most amazing inventions. This device is for use in central offices in the large cities, where thousands of telephone calls must pass through two exchanges.

In operation, it functions this way: a subscriber dials a telephone number and the device, located in a central office, translates the electrical impulses into the proper numbers and actually says the numbers to the distant operator, who completes the call.

The staff at the Laboratories numbers about 5,500 men and women, more than half of whom are scientists. Their sole aim is to make more perfect the art of communication. Most of their work is of direct benefit to the communications industry and the public that utilizes these facilities, although frequently their incidental discoveries are of pronounced humanitarian value. In this connection, they invented the artificial larynx, which enables persons who have lost their power of speech through operations to regain their vocal powers. Bell scientists also perfected the electrical stethoscope for recording heart beats. This device has won the commendation of leading medical men throughout the country.

Donegal Chapter, No. 422, Order of Eastern Star, celebrated their third anniversary on Thursday evening, by holding a birthday party in connection with a program of entertainment and refreshments. There were about 80 members present. A duet was sung by Mrs. Charles B. Seigel and Mrs. John S. Simons; an Irish dance was given by two young ladies; solo, Mrs. Charles B. Seigel. The Maytown and Bainbridge members presented a sketch entitled "The Sister Masons," which was given in three parts. A goat, secured through one of the members, was in the scene of the final degree, and created considerable laughter. The Eastern Star is one of Marietta's newest organizations.

U.S. Telephone Industry Has 400,000 Employees

Equipped with more than 20,000,000 telephones, the American public requires the daily services of more than 400,000 individuals to operate and maintain its telephone facilities, according to a recent article in the Bell Laboratories Record by C. W. Foss, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The telephone user merely sees a telephone instrument, and hears the voice of an operator. Beyond that he gives little thought to the telephone plant or personnel. Yet the one telephone that he uses represents but an infinitesimal part of the four billion dollars invested in the country's telephone plant and equipment, all of which must be ready at all times for his service, since no one in the telephone business knows which two telephones are to be physically connected in completing the call.

Telephone operators comprise nearly one-half of the total telephone personnel, but without the assistance of thousands of other men and women, the industry could not have developed to its present magnitude nor could it be maintained.
