AN OLD LAND MARK COMPLETELY DESTROYED

Fire of undetermined origin Saturday morning wiped out a landmark of early rafting days along the Susquehanna river when the old Anchor Tavern, South of Washington Borough, used as a tobacco shed, was burned to the ground. Once the popular over-night stopping place of river raftsmen, this 200-year-old log-built structure, 24x95, was a mass of charred embers when the fire was discovered about 4 a. m.

FOUND COPY OF AN OLD PAPER

(From page 1) Elizabethtown schools, the old German type glistens with details of early Lancaster county, its trials and tribulations, its politics and business. According to their translation the paper was printed on "Ga Druked" by John Baer, exactly opposite John Michael's hotel which according to other information in the paper was then located near the Lancaster court house (in the square).

The price of the publication was $1.00 per year, paid in advance, or 25c per copy. The publication was issued quarterly, according to other information in the copy. It specifically states that no one can lift his name from the subscription list, unless his subscription is paid in full. According to information in this copy, this paper was Issue No. 44 and published in the twenty-fifth year of the publishing business at Lancaster.

Considerable space is given to a large variety of news of that day, including both local and foreign news, with special attention focused on governmental affairs, political matters and foreign news in Europe and especially Germany. Caterpillars Threaten Crops
According to a news item in this publication, a grave pestilence in the form of caterpillars, were threatening the fruit crops of Lancaster and Lebanon counties at that time. Whole groves of fruit trees were covered with the pest it announced, and their white webs literally covering the fruit trees, made them take on the appearance of "Christmas Day" when the trees are covered with snow. Other places where the pests had destroyed the leaves, the trees again resembled Christmas, as they were left barren and naked. One farmer reported $1,000.00 worth of damage in his grove alone, which was considered a great loss in these early days.

Rheems was Plantation
The notice of a sale of the plantation on which the village of Rheems, along the Lancaster and Harrisburg pike, just outside of Elizabethtown, is now located, was published at that time. This plantation according to the notice was situated about halfway between Mt. Joy and Elizabethtown, along the Lancaster and Harrisburg pike, and near the road from Colebrook to Baltimore. It contained 154 acres of tilled land, 40 acres of woodland, and a small meadow, and was once the property of Samuel Reim. Mr. Reim decided to sell the property, because the family wanted to "Go West," the notice stated.

Postmen Returned Lost Articles
A lost and found notice reveals that a double filled silver watch, was lost between Lancaster and Brubaker's Hotel, along the Mannheim road, and that a reward of $3.00 would be paid to the finder if he returned it to Heinrich Schwartz, the postman, who in turn would return it to its rightful owner.

Appropriations
The annual Congressional appropriation of funds nearly 100 years ago totaled $1,700,804.24, compared to our billions of dollars appropriated for similar purposes, according to an announcement in this copy of the Volks Freund. Following are the items for which this amount was appropriated during the administration of President Jackson: Civil service, $2,897,487.00; Military service, $4,966,036.40; Pension purposes, $628,917.00; Navy purposes, $3,850,963.28; Indian Department, for Indian Land Grants and Homesteads, $2,206,696.76; Improvement of yards, rivers and streets, $1,089,993.30; Improvements to the White House and Capitol buildings, $89,870.00; Incidental expenses, $73,880.00. This appropriation was made during the second session of the twenty-second congress.

Grain Prices Similar To Those Of Today
Judging from the prices paid farmers for grain 100 years ago, there is little and in some instances, no difference in the prices paid farmers in Lancaster county today for the same product. The prices paid Lancaster county farmers in those early days of trade, $1.15, compared to $1.07 today; corn $1.72 per bushel, compared to $1.48 today; Rye $3.07 per bushel, and Barley $7.50 per bushel. While flour was sold for $5.50 per barrel, practically the same price as today.

UNEARTH SKELETON OF HUGE INDIAN

Included in the finds made by State research experts, working under Dr. Cadzow, in excavations at Washington Borough, was the skeleton of an immense Indian. Measuring more than six feet in length, the frame of what perhaps once was one of the tallest of the tribe was uncovered in full form. Near it were pots of beads, kettles, parts of rifles, a small container with caps used in the old musket type guns, and a sword and lead bullets. An Indian pipe, measuring more than 2 feet in length, was regarded as one of the best finds in years.

The digging is under way on Elizabeth street in the borough and in making their most recent finds the experts went down less than three feet. Before the relics are removed from the ground photos are taken of their original appearance.
