Relief From Curse
of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says,
"Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."
But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation.
Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night.
Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.

CAMP TO OPEN
AT LANDISVILLE

SIXTY-FIRST SEASON TO START
THERE NEXT SUNDAY, JULY 27, TO CONTINUE TWO WEEKS

Despite the fact that all of the debris left in its wake by a freak storm of several weeks ago has not been entirely removed, the Landisville Camp Meeting will open its sixty-first season on Sunday, July 27, according to an announcement made this week by A. S. Dillinger, president of the association.

Following the storm which practically wrecked a number of cottages, damaged many more, destroyed lighting systems, uprooted trees and left the beautiful grove disfigured and scarred, it was feared that the date for the annual period of religious meetings would have to be deterred to a later date. However, workmen have been clearing away the wreckage and debris and the previously arranged schedule will not be interrupted.

Nearly a hundred trees, many of them giants over two centuries old were uprooted or broken off by the sudden gale which assumed cyclonic proportions. Twenty-three cottages were damaged, five of them being crushed so badly that they practically had to be rebuilt. Roads through the grove were blocked and the lighting system, which illuminates the roads as well as the cottages, reduced to a tangled mass of wire.

Reconstruct Camp

As the date for the opening of the current season approaches, the work of reconstructing the camp is going ahead rapidly. Every one of the twenty-three damaged cottages has been repaired, the roads opened and lights again placed in service. By next Sunday most of the grounds will be freed of limbs and fallen tree-tops although it is not expected that the tree trunks will be removed by that time. They are being sawed into cord length and split for fire wood.

Had the storm been of greater proportions, it would have broken a sequence of camp meetings longer than the history of any other in the state.

For an uninterrupted period of sixty-years, since the founding of the Landisville camp, the regular season of religious meetings has been held. At one time they were so popular that as many as 5,000 people attended the meetings and special trains were run on both the Reading and Pennsylvania railroads. Excursion cars were frequently added by the local traction company and all types of conveyances were used to bring people to the grove.

Auto Changed Camp

The automobile has wrought great changes in the camp, according to Dillinger. While just as many people attended the religious meetings now as in the days prior to the popularity of the auto and the advent of good roads, fewer people plan to stay any length of time at the grounds.

Before rapid transportation changed the aspect of the camp meetings, people came in horse drawn vehicles, a mode of transportation so slow that they could not plan to make the trip often. They usually brought their tents and stayed for several days attending three or four church services a day, spending the remaining part of the day as an outing Camp meeting meant almost as much a period of good times, play, recreation and the renewal of old friendships as it did a period of religious education.

The origin of camp meetings in this section of Pennsylvania came about in 1867 largely through the efforts of Rev. Charles L. Thompson, then pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of this city. Thompson came to Lancaster from Maryland where camp meetings were very popular. He was an enthusiastic exponent of the system of holding meetings of an evangelistic and educational nature, free from congregational or denominational discriminations and in 1867 managed to induce the First Methodist Episcopal church of Columbia to join with his own congregation in holding a camp meeting at Manheim. The meeting was very successful. In fact it attracted such crowds and created so much enthusiastic comment that the following year the National Camp Meeting Association was held here.

Many prominent preachers attended and spoke at the meetings and for the first time the camp began to assume the proportions of a permanent organization.

In 1869 the camp was held at Lebanon where Methodist churches in that section became interested. At this camp a committee composed of members from Methodist churches in Lancaster, Columbia, Harrisburg, Lebanon, and Reading, was appointed to select a permanent camp site.

This committee which was headed by Rev. Thompson of this city, visited sites in Berks, Lebanon, Dauphin and Lancaster counties and finally decided on the Landisville grove, the present meeting place. The grove, which consisted of 24 1-2 acres was selected and improvements begun at once.

Tabernacle First

One of the first structures built was the tabernacle in which the services were held. For several years it remained the most imposing building on the grounds and during the two weeks camp meeting each year it was the central figure in a village of tents. Later the roadway was laid out and the grove divided up into building lots. Cottages were built and today the camp grounds has assumed the proportions of a village to itself. In its organization, the association which governs the camp grounds is much like the governing body of a town. There is an executive committee which corresponds to a council, a finance committee, light and sunds committee, sanitary and committee, committee of public worship, worship, committee on entertainment and a committee on athletics. One of the unique features of the Landisville camp is that there are no collections lifted during the religious services. Admission is charged to the grounds and a land rent is levied on the cottage owners and lot holders.

Improvements to the grounds are constantly being made. In 1913 a gate-house was built. This building serves as the home for the caretaker who is employed by the association and also a toll gate where admissions are collected. A new tabernacle was built in 1907 and street lights were added two years later. The association operates a restaurant and until several years ago conducted "Wheatland" a boarding house and hotel. Over 1,000 young trees have been planted in the grove since it was taken over by the camp.

The association has had ten presidents of which Samuel H. Boyd of Columbia was in office for the greatest period of time. Boyd, who is a resident of Columbia and who will soon celebrate his eightieth birthday, served as president of the association for twenty-five years. He was succeeded this year by A. S. Dillinger of Harrisburg, who has long been associated with the camp. Other presidents have been Rev. C. I. Thompson, D. D., of Lancaster; Rev. J. P. Crouch, Henry Bruner, Columbia; Gen. Wm. Patton, Columbia; Hon. W. S. Smith, Bainbridge; W. K. Bender, Strasburg; John J. High, Reading and George E. Wisner, Lancaster.

The daily schedule during the camp meeting includes a service at 9:30 o'clock in the morning which is devoted to Bible Study. At 10:30 there is a meeting for boys and girls. No further services are held until the Young People's Hour at 6:30 followed by evening worship at 7:30. The remaining hours of the day are devoted to supervised play and recreation.

The first service in the camp this year was an impromptu one following the storm which nearly wrecked the camp. Forty people were in the camp at the time and not one person was injured. On the Sunday morning following the storm, the people who had been in their cottages at the time held a special thanksgiving service for the special providence which had been shown them during the terrifying fifteen minutes. The service was conducted by Rev. Hershey, a retired minister living in the grove.

Give Roses Good Care

Roses must always be planted firmly. The top 2 or 3 inches of soil should be cultivated every week. Never sprinkle the rose bed; apply water freely so that plenty of moisture will reach the root system.
