SOUND ADVICE

It is surprising how quickly a building or farm will take on a dilapidated appearance if something is not done each year to keep things in repair. A small annual expenditure on upkeep is advisable rather than waiting until conditions are such that a large outlay is necessary to save the situation.

BE YOURSELF

Helen Havener, New York Editor, gives some advice to women—especially those in business. Don't try to be a "type," she says. The masculine type is not attractive and the designing, ultrafeminine sort is just as bad. Her best word is be yourself. That's a good word for anybody. They have read about "types" in motion picture magazines or seen them on the stage. Be natural. Be friendly. Be yourself. It's the best program.

THE FARMER CARRIES ON

The newspapers of late, have carried numerous articles telling of men in the city suddenly thrown out of employment, of families in dire want, and now and then, of breadlines. But on the farms, cream separators have been humming, binders clattering, tractors chug their steady way, and men, machines and horses are at work. Life on the farm may not all be roses, but many a former farm boy who has walked the city streets vainly searching for work can testify that the farm is not such a bad place after all.

A FATHER'S SACRIFICE

In an eastern factory a man faints the other day, due to malnutrition. This isn't unusual. Men, women and children have done that often. But this story is a little more pathetic than the usual tales. Someone looked into the man's dinner pail to see what he had brought for lunch. Instead of the expected—or maybe not expected—thick meat sandwiches, fruit, eggs and coffee, the searcher found the skins of the potatoes which the man's children had eaten for supper the night before. He had gone without food quite cheerfully until his strength gave away. He hadn't wanted to ask for aid. He had too much pride. If a man had a family it was his duty to support the family, he reasoned. The other employees in this man's department immediately took up a collection and bought food for him and his family.

HOW TO CURE A TRAFFIC EVIL

Rickety old cars driven by individuals whose pocketbooks are not sufficiently well lined to enable them to have insurance protection are a real menace on the road. All motorists are familiar with the "lizzies" of uncertain vintage which chug along the highway crammed to capacity, and more in many instances, usually with juveniles whose one aim in life at that particular time is to have a good time. This is all very well provided the rights of other people are respected and protected, but usually they are not. The result is that the most careful driver may be mixed up in an accident thru no fault of his and his car may be damaged or some of his passengers disabled and the person responsible is not able to make financial reparation. A simple cure for this all too common motoring ill would be a law compelling all cars costing less than $200 to be fully covered by insurance. Full coverage would cost almost half the value of the car, making it prohibitive for many people. Such law would prevent some motorists from driving rattle traps who cannot afford them, and it would also give a greater margin of protection to those who use the highways with "care, courtesy and common sense."

THOSE TREE SITTERS

A dispatch from Bremerton, Wash., states that Preston Leard and Stewart Babbitt remained seated in a tree for 518 hours and 50 minutes and therefore have been declared the world's champion tree sitters. The story continues to the effect that the boys, both aged 15, were taken on a fire truck at the head of a parade—securely lodged in the local asylum—no, we are wrong—they were taken to the city dock, given an airplane ride and later feted at a dance. Anyway, our slip seems pardonable under the circumstances, for of all the silly, childish and utterly foolish and useless "stunts" of which America is so enamored this seems to be the prize pippin. After all, it doesn't call for any degree of endurance, courage, common-
