A "FRIENDLY" TARIFF

In the past most of us have been interested in the tariff only in its relation to domestic industrial and agricultural conditions. Now we must likewise look at it in the light of international relations.

Prosperity and progress in the future will be largely determined by the volume of business carried on between us and other nations. What is wanted is a tariff that, while protecting American living standards, wages and industries against unfair foreign competition, will likewise allow development of our trade relations with the rest of the world.

ROADS VS. SCHOOLS

It is a bit surprising, but Pennsylvania is spending more for road building than for school purposes. A recapitulation of State finances for the last fiscal biennium, according to Arthur P. Townsend, State budget secretary, shows 43.25 cents of every dollar spent by the Commonwealth goes for road construction and 28.23 cents for the cost of education.

Naturally it is unfair to compare roads with schools, for both are essential to the upbuilding and advancement of the commonwealth. But it seems that the State in its appropriations to school districts could be a little more liberal. By so doing, it could help to ease the burdens of school boards, who are censured, many times unjustly for the high tax rates.

Perhaps a 50-50 division of revenues would be more equitable.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

The National Board of Fire Underwriters reports that the fire loss during July was $34,847,750—$3,862,257 more than in July, 1929. The total loss for the first seven months of this year has been $277,187,521, as compared with $292,078,288 during the same period last year, an increase of more than $15,000,000.

The discouraging fact is that we are once more on our way toward a half-billion dollar annual waste. For the past few years there has been a small but steady decrease in annual loss and it was hoped that the American people were at last becoming "fire conscious." Apparently the hope was unfounded. Carelessness and ignorance continue to destroy, thru the medium of fire, thousands of irreplaceable lives and a gigantic amount of property each year.

This week, October 5-11, has been set aside as "Fire Prevention Week." Once more private and public organizations will endeavor to instill in the public a knowledge of fire hazards, of the need for better building construction and the like. Once more we will have the opportunity to learn, under expert guidance, lessons that are of direct financial benefit to all of us. The issue is up to the public. Our gigantic fire loss is a menace to prosperity, to home building, to industrial progress. It is a national disgrace that can be remedied only by unceasing vigilance in our homes and places of business.

"SAFETY" STARTS IN SCHOOLS

Developing intelligent citizens through safety education and teaching accident prevention as a means of promoting interest in workmen's compensation and other related problems, is advocated by L. T. Tustin, Supervisor of Rural Schools in the state of West Virginia. He points out that a cautious man or woman is seldom injured except through momentary lack of concentration of thought or through the unexpected presence of an unusual circumstance whose consequence cannot be avoided.

Mr. Tustin cites the appalling growth of the automobile death rate, and says: "It is clear to me that there is need of some consistent effort to reduce the number of public accidents. It also appears clear that if the school can do something to this end, it is wholly justified in including in its curriculum instruction designed to decrease the constantly growing number of accidents and deaths."

"The progressive teacher will experience new means of making her schoolroom a living, active world, in which the children acquire the experiences of life through living; in which these experiences will be organized for the control of situations outside the schoolroom, that

Bee May Give Up Lease, but She's Good Tenant

About 8,000,000 colonies of bees acknowledge human protection in the United States and return for it more than 140,000,000 pounds of honey a year. It is a curious relationship that exists between men and bees. For no matter how long domesticated, the bee remains a true barbarian. Though she may trace her ancestry through hundreds of generations of hive-dwellers, she, without a moment's notice, may take to the woods, make her home in a hollow tree and revert completely to the primitive.

The compact between man and bee is that of landlord and tenant. The beekeeper tricks his bees into staying with him by furnishing apartments to their liking. But the bee never surrenders her liberty nor her complete right of choice. If she is not pleased with the condition of the new house offered her at swarming time, she promptly moves out and takes to tall timber.

But the beekeepers have learned to humor the fickle whims of their winged tenants. That 140,000,000 pounds of honey was worth about $23,000,000, a pretty good rental for the type of houses and service the bees required.

Historic Old Pepps House

Part of College System Impington hall, historic home of the Pepps family, was presented to the Cambridgehire education committee as a memorial to John Chivers, founder of the Jam Firm, says a London dispatch to the New York Times. Impington hall forms the nucleus of a village college for the area of Histon and Cottenham, from which village the head of the Pepps family, Lord Cottenham, takes his title.

The house was begun about the middle of the sixteenth century by John Pepps. It includes a central hall and gallery and is still substantially what it has been for the last 300 years, though there were additions in 1862 and 1906.

Allusions to Impington in Samuel Pepys' diary begin on July 15, 1691, with, "Took to Impington, where I found my old uncle sitting all alone like a man out of the world." The educational authorities have not altered the old buildings, which are in a good state of preservation and include many beautiful paneled rooms with seventeenth century ceilings.

Famous Frenchwoman

Anne Louise Germaine Necker, Baronne de Staël-Holstein, was born at Paris, April 22, 1766. Her father was the famous financier, Necker. Her mother was Suzanne Curchod. She was a plain child, but a coquette and desirous of prominence and attention. Excessive study and intellectual excitement injured her health, which was improved by the family's removal to Coppet, her father's estate on the lake of Geneva. In 1796 Necker published a novel, "Sophie," and in 1799, a tragedy, "Jeanne Gray." Her first marriage was to Eric Magnus, baron of Staël-Holstein, first an attaché of the Swedish legation and later minister. She was twenty at the time and her husband thirty-seven.

Provide 1931 Hay

In considering emergency hay crops next year it is well to remember that oats, wheat, soybeans, and other crops can be used. Using this year's meadows for hay again next year is another possibility, even if it does upset the rotation. In most cases a heavy yield can be expected if the field is fertilized early in the spring.

Control Late Blight

Spray celery every 10 to 14 days with 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture to control late blight, as the cool fall weather promotes the development of this disease.

The children will face in their later lives.

It is interesting to note, in this connection, that the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters has for some years been pioneering the idea of teaching accident prevention in the schools, knowing that a child who has been taught the principles of safety will be a more careful adult. That this work has been beneficial is evidenced by statistics which show that the accident rate for school children has been improved in the face of increases for the public at large.

THE FARM-TO-MARKET ROADS

Recently the Federal government as part of its drouth relief program in various sections of the country, advanced four months Federal road money, with the request that work be started as soon as possible so as to relieve and give employment to farmers in the damaged areas. The American Farm Bureau Federation is urging State Farm Bureau officials to cooperate in every manner with state highway departments in seeing that proper localities and individuals receive needed aid.

This will tide many families over a slack period and prevent or alleviate much suffering. Every farm and every community in the sections to which money has been advanced will benefit from stimulated road construction. Long after the drouth has been forgotten, the roads will be arteries of commerce, bringing prosperity to a multitude of farms.

Another encouraging announcement came last month from the Department of Agriculture, which stated that the counties of the United States improved 45,481 miles of local and county roads in 1929, at a cost of more than $800,000,000.

When a majority of farms are served by water-proof surfaced, year-round farm-to-market highways we will have taken a long step toward the solution of agricultural problems.

The general business depression has extended to the market for logs and lumber. Prices are low and there is little movement in this line. The best practice now includes letting valuable trees stand or cutting only after sale has been contracted.

Commissioner Benjamin G. Eynon of the Motor Vehicles Bureau has announced that applications for 1931 vehicle registration will be mailed to car owners October 15. "In the meantime," he said, "persons who have changed their addresses since receiving 1930 plates will do well to notify this Bureau at once, else they will not receive applications for next year's tags. Postal regulations forbid the forwarding of this class of mail matter—therefore post office attaches will not re-address the cards of the persons who have moved." Up to this time, the Bureau of Motor Vehicles has addressed 1,200,000 applications for next year. Between the time they receive their applications and January 1, car owners will have 77 days in which to return cards and remittance covering next year's fee.
