Grapefruit Plentiful

OWING to a big crop of Florida grapefruit this year, there has been a sharp decline in the price of fresh fruit. An abundance of excellent canned grapefruit will also be available this year at reasonable prices for the same reason. One grapefruit grower whose orchards are close to the Gulf claims that the salt breezes put that certain tang into the flavor of the fruit which makes it distinctive. The canned product retains this tang and also the wealth of mineral and vitamin content that is in grapefruit, because it is sun-ripened, picked and packed when fully mature.

New Tested Recipes

Here is a formula for a delicious Sunday morning cocktail, quickly prepared with canned grapefruit juice; and another for an excellent dinner salad which is gay in color:

Prune and Grapefruit Cocktail: Cut prunes from their pits and stew. Use one cup of stewed prune pulp and add the contents of a No. 2 can of grapefruit hearts and one-half cup of orange pulp and juice. Add four tablespoons of confectioner's sugar, if you prefer a sweet cocktail. This serves eight persons.

Grapefruit and Grape Salad: Drain and chill one No. 2 can of grapefruit and one cup of seeded white grapes. Make a French dressing, using grapefruit juice instead of vinegar. Arrange the fruit on lettuce hearts and pour over the dressing. Garnish each salad with strips of pimiento and a ring of green pepper. This serves eight persons.

Better Breakfasts

IT will be much easier to do all of those worthy things you resolved to do this happy New Year if you start the day right. No, we don't refer to morning hymns or daily devotions, but something very easy and pleasant to do—eat a better breakfast. "Easy enough to eat," says the housewife, "but not so easy to prepare in limited time." That sounds like a good argument, but as a matter of fact, it isn't. For example, here is a delicious breakfast which can be prepared for the most part, the evening before—while the dinner dishes are being washed.

one teaspoon sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon Tabasco sauce, one-eighth tea-

Snappy Winter Cocktail: Shake together the following ingredients—two 9-ounce cans of tomato juice, two tablespoons lemon juice, spoon Worcestershire sauce. Let stand in the ice-box over night and shake again just before serving. This serves six persons.

COLUMBIA HOME 201 YEARS OLD

GEORGE WASHINGTON IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN A GUEST THERE FOR SEVERAL DAYS

Since the construction of the new $3,000,000 inter-county span between Columbia and Wrightsville, which caused the razing of the oldest house at Columbia Mrs. Carrie Rasbridge, besides having the honor of owning an old Colonial home, now also has her residence in what is now Columbia's oldest house.

The house was erected in 1729, 202 years ago, by Le Fau Bennett, a Frenchman, a hunter and trapper. He became a man of means and a large land owner near the present town site. The house was built under his supervisions by masons and carpenters who were brought here solely for this particular home from Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Built of Limestone It was sturdily erected of limestone, oak and walnut wood, just two years following the erection of the old Bethel homestead at Second and Walnut streets, which was started in 1725 and completed in 1727, and which was razed to make way for the bridge.

According to old records, George Washington is supposed to have been a guest in the house for several days. In connection with his visit the story is still told about the large tree still standing near the old home, which is known as the "Tree of Heaven" or "Tree of Paradise." This tree, at one time very plentiful in this country, has become nearly extinct. When in foliage it presents a wonderful picture with its dainty fern-like leaves. The fruit of the tree is a large bean, similar to a giant vanilla bean, which when roasted in an oven and eaten tastes almost like the Mexican vanilla bean, and is of much food value.

Washington, according to the records discovered many years ago, stood bare-headed under this tree in deep respect, as it was such a tree which his mother loved so well.

LICENSE FUNDS STOCK STREAMS

THE FISHERMEN ARE URGED TO TAKE OUT THEIR LICENSES AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE—INCREASES IN EARLY

Commissioner of Fisheries O. M. Deibler today urged all fishermen to take out their fishing licenses as early in the season as possible so that the Board can continue its program as laid out at the fish hatcheries. Licenses have been available since the first of the year at all offices of county treasurers.

The trout season opens on April 15 and all indications point toward a good fishing season. Reports have been received from the Board's officers as to the fishing in their respective districts and these show that the major trout streams will undoubtedly furnish much fishing.

The number of licenses issued has been increasing each year. During 1930, 265,000 licenses were issued. Through this co-operation of the fishermen it has been possible to greatly increase the output of fish. During 1930, 817,000 trout were distributed ranging in size from 6 to 10 inches. This year the Board intends to increase the number distributed and fishermen, by taking out their licenses now, will be contributing their share towards keeping fish in Pennsylvania waters, officials said.

Those fishermen who are planning a two day trip should get in touch with the Fish Commission at Harrisburg for a copy of the little booklet, "Where to go Fishing." This contains a list of the better known fishing streams and their location. The Commission welcomes correspondence at any time and to the best of its ability will supply information available at all times.
