COLD STORAGE STOCKS LESS; MAY LEAD TO IMPROVED CONDITIONS

> One of the bright spots on the agricultural horizon, says the Pennsylvania Department of Agriuclture, is the reduced quantity of farm produce in cold storage in the United States now compared with the fiveyear average.

The amount of meats is 45,000,000; pounds less; lard, 50,000,000 pounds less; frozen poultry, 5,000,000 pounds less; creamery butter, 22,000,000 lbs less; cheese, 10,000,000 pounds less; case eggs, 750,000 cases less; and frozen eggs, 1,400,000 pounds less than last year but 30,000,000 more than the five year average. The amount of cream in storage is fully 40 per cent less than a year ago.

These reductions which average from five to fifty per cent of the totals prevailing during the past few years, should aid the general economic situation during the coming vear in two ways: first, it should result in less forcing of cold storage goods into market channels this winter, and second: it will likely lead to more aggressive buying of produce for storage purposes next spring and summer, Department officials explain
