Rules To Guide If Lost In Woods

came bewildered while attempting to "cut across country" in regions of the State where the topography of the State is steep and rugged. The falling of darkness always complicates the situation, and unless the person lost is experienced in woods lore he usually spends the night out. It is not uncommon for forest fire fighters to get separated from their crews at night. The most tragic occurrence of this kind happened during the spring when a fire fighter in Carbon county became lost for several days, during which time he was exposed to cold and rain, and later died.

Neither is it impossible for a forester to get lost, as experience proved when one of the foresters in Pike county spent an involuntary day and night in the woods.

Rules to Follow
Secretary, Lewis E. Staley of the Department of Forests and Waters, who has had many years' experience in the woods, both while employed in lumbering operations and after becoming a technically trained forester suggests the following six rules for those who stray off the marked forest trails:

1. Sit down and rest. Study the lay of the land; try to find out where you are.
2. Don't yell for help, and don't wear yourself out trying to run thru the undergrowth or trying to push through drifted snow.
3. Don't walk aimlessly about. Travel only downhill. Follow a stream downwards, if possible. They usually lead to a habitation.
4. Don't try to seek a way out during the night or in a storm or fog. Find a sheltered place and make a camp. Gather plenty of dry wood and build a fire in a safe place. Be careful not to set the woods on fire and extinguish your camp fire before leaving.
5. If you are injured, build a smoke signal fire, if possible in an open spot on a knob or ridge top.
6. Don't lose your head and don't give up.

During the Pennsylvania hunting season, hunters occasionally get temporarily lost in the forest. In the freezing weather and in blizzards, which are not unusual in early December in parts of Pennsylvania, the danger of getting lost increases. Secretary Staley recommends that hunters unfamiliar with a region should always accompany an experienced person. A small pocket compass is useful, providing the person carrying one knows which direction he should travel to return to camp.

3 Periods Rock Writing Found

writings have been taken from the river. Many of the rocks weighed hundreds of pounds and had to be chiseled away above dangerous rapids. The enterprise is unusual in that the Pennsylvania Water & Power Company, which is changing the appearance of the river region so materially, has been concerned with the scientific value of the rocks.

This company co-operated with the State Museum in removing the unread picture writings. Donald A. Cadzow supervised the work.

The discoveries are expected to shed light on early inhabitants of the Eastern part of the United States. "Three periods of rock writing have been identified," Mr. Cadzow said. "The most ancient was found under 10 feet of river-washed soil on a large island. The older pictographs remind one of modern Asiatic writing."

"Those of the latest period are made up largely of animals, birds and human figures pecked into the rocks and have been identified as having been made by prehistoric ancestors of the Algonkian Indians, who lived along the Susquehanna when the white men came."

More than 300 complete pottery vessels and many other objects were taken from the area of the rock writing. Valuable archaeological data were collected and many charts, molds and picture writing and scale models of the land were made.

Educating the Motoring Public

PRESIDENT GABLE URGES MOTORISTS TO DO THEIR FULL SHARE IN MOVE TO REDUCE SCHOOL CHILDREN TOLL

The ever-increasing number of accidents on our public highways demands a concerted movement on the part of all motorists against the careless and reckless automobile driver. Our highways can be made safe from foot drivers if all motorists join in movement to bring the activity of the crossing of a white line where the driver does not have a clear vision for a distance of two or three hundred feet; speeding up when another car attempts to pass, cutting corners, failure to give the proper signal when stopping, backing, about to turn, or pulling away from the curb when parked, cutting in and out of line, and passing two abreast at grade crossings and road or street intersections.

Motorists can help decrease these violations if they but will. Often the near victim of an accident due to a careless driver takes the number of the offender's license and is determined to bring the guilty party to justice. By the time he has returned home, however, his righteous indignation passes, the instance is forgotten and the guilty villain who nearly caused an accident which might have resulted in loss of life goes unpunished and will repeat the same performance again and again.

Every automobile driver should realize that every gross offense and misdemeanor on our public highways, if left unpunished, will place somebody's life and property sooner or later in jeopardy. Since we are all aware that there are not enough highway patrolmen to curb all the fool drivers, automobilists should see the wisdom of protecting themselves and others by reporting all reckless and negligent driving. Of course this does not mean every petty offense, but major violations.

The average man dislikes to take such a case to court. Then, too, many offenses are committed through ignorance of law or through thoughtlessness. In order to promote safety on our public highways let us suggest that offenders be reported to the Lancaster Automobile Club. After such a complaint is made the club will send a letter to the offender stating exactly how he violated the law and make it clear to him that if he persists in being reckless and negligent and further complaints are lodged against him his case, together with the evidence, shall be given to the State Highway Department for action. This, if evidence is sufficient, may mean a suspension of his license, or just a reprimand. If the reckless driver once knows that his record is kept at Harrisburg and that he runs chances of losing his license he will begin to sit up and take notice, especially if he is quoted Section 615 of the motor vehicle code, which says:

"The Secretary of Highways may suspend the operators' license or learner's permit of any person, with or without a hearing before the Secretary or his representative, and without receiving a record of conviction of such person of crime whenever the Secretary has reason to believe: first, that such person has committed any offense for the conviction of which mandatory revocation of license is provided in this act; second, that such person is incompetent to operate a motor vehicle, or is afflicted with mental or physical infirmities, or disabilities, rendering it unsafe for such person to operate a motor vehicle upon the highways; third that such person is an habitual reckless operator of a motor vehicle or has committed any violation of the motor vehicle laws of this commonwealth."

If our highways are ever to be made safe the assistance of the general public through the various automobile clubs is a paramount factor. Automobile clubs are safety clearing houses, ready and willing to establish safety on our highways for their members and for the thousands of others who daily use the roads. Law without public sentiment back of it is difficult to enforce. Therefore, if the motor vehicle code is to be strictly enforced the general public must assist the State highway patrol and, through the various automobile clubs as clearing houses, act in unison against the reckless driver.

If this is done it will result in ridding our highways of much recklessness now so prevalent, because the reckless operator will realize that he is under constant supervision, not only of the motor patrol, but of every other automobilist.
