NOW IT'S RIGHT

After a lot of experimenting the Pennsylvania State Game Commission hit the nail squarely upon the head when it made the open season on deer, any sex, during the same period.

Heretofore, buck were killed during deer season and vice versa but this year that cannot be done. Next December if you want to shoot a deer, be sure it's legal and then shoot. By legal we mean a buck must have a Y and an antler deer must weigh 40 lbs. or over, antlers removed.

We predict many less violations this year than in any previous deer hunting season and our State Game Commission is to be complimented for the change.

NO PLACE FOR TRUCKS

Members of the Ohio Public Utilities commission recently took an action which should win it the gratitude of motorists all over the country. It denied two trucking firms the right to operate over the main lake shore highway—United States 20—which connects the middle west with the east, on the ground that that highway holds all the traffic it can handle already.

It might be a good thing if other official bodies would copy this ruling. After all, the highways were paved primarily for the pleasure car motorist. Paying passengers and freight were transported about the country very well before motor bus and truck were invented, and the railroads are far from over-burdened with business. When traffic on any highway gets too heavy for comfort, it is time to cut down the number of commercial vehicles that use it.

GOING TO THE DOGS

Now, Mr. Preacher before you commence to criticize us, before you say we are indulging in profanity in our caption, you just listen to the story because it happens to be true and you have our permission to use it as a text for one of your good sermons.

The young man told us this himself as a something that happened to his father. He said for no reason he could ever figure out, his father went out one morning and hitched himself up with a steer, with the idea of doing a little cultivating. The young man was in the barnyard at the end of a lane and pretty soon he heard his father yell, "Stop us, Eddie Stop us, Eddie." The steer was running away with father and, of course, said the son, there was no chance of stopping them. The boy said as they passed him his father turned his head and said, "Never mind, Eddie, let us go to the dogs."

There are altogether too many business men in this country now who hitch themselves up with fear, altogether too many who say "Nothing like this has happened before" and "The world is simply going to the bow-wows."

"Well, all right. If anybody insists upon killing his business and ruining himself financially and physically, he may go to it. Nobody can stop him. But, praises be to Allah—there are left a host of business men who still have faith in the Almighty, themselves and their Uncle Sam. Those men, through courage and by hard work, are proving that the laws of compensation and reaction are as provable today as they have been through all of the previous depressions through which we have passed and come out on top.

If "thought-waves" are scientific, and they are, please bear in mind that we are pulling for your success.

FEEDING FIVE HOUNDS

Here is a purported confession of a West Tennessee man that is entirely too good not to pass along:

There seems to be so much talk about our so-called prosperity I believe 'tis my duty to write my views on same and help to analyze the situation as far as possible so's we can make up our minds that we had auto change our ways of living and so forth.

I have taken my own case for instance. I see my mistakes and many others have acted likewise. I bought a car instead of a farm and it is worn out, but the farm I figured on is still O. K. I invested in a radio instead of a cow and the radio gives static instead of milk.

I am feeding five hounds which answer to the names of Red, Red Wing, Slobber, Jake and Bayrum—instead of five pigs. I had our piano tuned instead of the well cleaned out. I spent all my cash in 1928 and used my credit in 1929 and traded up my future wages on installments in 1930, so hard times ought me in bad shape last fall.

Meets Next Monday

Our regular monthly meeting will be held in the Farm Bureau room, Woolworth Building, Lancaster, Pa., on Monday, October 12th, at 2 P. M. There will be a general discussion on tobacco conditions, including the outlook for prices, condition of crops, etc.

If I had spent my last $10.00 for flour and meat instead of gas and oil, I would have been O. K. I built a nice garage last year instead of covering my barn and I loafed in a mountain two weeks instead of being in my pasture fixing it so's my cow won't get out, but she is dry and mortgaged to boot for two blankets my wife bought from an agent instead of paying the preacher.

I am on a cash basis now, but ain't got no cash. I am tied to the end of my rope and the man I am working for is busted on account of nobody would pay him and his cotton won't sell 'cause nobody won't buy no cotton clothes, all the gals wear silk stockings and silk underclothes right here in our cotton patches. I had $4.00 saved up for a rainy day, but it turned dry and I spent the $4.00 for two inner tubes.

I tried hard to make both ends meet with a turnip patch, but when I got turnips ready to sell, everybody was selling turnips for nothing and the market was glutted. I am worried plum to the bone and my wife's kind-folks are coming over next Tuesday to spend two weeks.

Write or phone if you hear of any relief from the government coming down my way, I am willing to be a Democrat or a Republican for a few weeks if that will help any.

Despite an increase in Pennsylvania farm mortgage debt of $35,000,000 between 1925 and 1930, the ratio of this debt to the value of mortgaged property has dropped from 41.1 to 39.5 per cent, says the bureau of statistics, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, in a review of Federal census figures just released. The mortgage debt was $122,744,578 in 1930 and the value of the mortgaged property, $310,942,821.

A census report on specified farm expenditures shows that Pennsylvania farmers paid $56,458,332 for hay, grain and mill feed purchased during 1929; $12,113,421 for fertilizer and $31,713,599 for farm labor. In all three cases, increases are shown when compared with 1924.

Census estimates on fruit indicate a downward trend in number of apple and peach trees but an increase in number of grape vines during the past ten years. The number of grape vines of all ages is estimated for 1929 at 8,899,361—almost twice as many as were shown by the census 30 years ago.

In farm improvements, the recent census shows astonishing changes since 1920. The number of automobiles on farms increased from 76,491 to 152,222; the number of motor trucks, from 9,872 to 47,062; and the number of tractors from 5,897 to 33,513. Farm homes with water piped into the dwelling increased from 46,402 to 64,064. Telephone connections decreased from 87,387 to 73,321, while dwellings lighted with electricity increased from 30,669 (gas included in this figure) to 45,638.

At the same time the women of the community will be entertained in the auditorium by demonstrations of ways in which electricity is simplifying household work.

A special program has been arranged for the evening. Plans also have been made whereby the local power company will arrange an evening demonstration of correct and incorrect home illumination.

DO YOU KEEP SUFFICIENT WATER IN "YOUR AQUARIUM"? ALL ANIMALS, EVEN FISH, REQUIRE A PROPER MIXTURE OF AIR AND WATER IN WHICH TO LIVE. AIR 4% - WATER 96% AIR 98.4% - WATER 1.6%. Fish cannot live in water that does not contain the proper air supply. Man cannot live in air that does not contain the proper water supply. HOME AIR IS UNHEALTHFUL IN WINTER WHEN IT DOES NOT CONTAIN SUFFICIENT MOISTURE. HOLLAND INSTITUTE OF THERMOLOGY

MAN LIVES IN AIR AS FISH IN WATER

Holland Institute of Thermology Traces Respiratory Diseases to Dry, Dusty Stagnant Air in Homes.

FISH cannot live in water that does not contain air. Neither can man live in air that is entirely free from water. In fact, all animal life requires for existence a proper mixture of both air and water, declares the Holland Institute of Thermology, of Holland, Mich., whose research engineers have found that even slight changes in the composition of life environments are often detrimental to healthful existence.

The most desirable mixture of these elements for fish life is 4 per cent air and 96 per cent water. When the volume of air is less than 4 per cent, fish are likely to suffocate. In the home, every pound of air heated to a temperature of 70 degrees should contain 110 1/2 grains of water to be most comfortable and healthful. This means a proportion of 18.4 per cent air and 1.6 per cent water. Yet in many homes during the winter season the amount of air moisture drops to one-third and even less of this amount. Such air is the result of old style methods of heating which provide no means for injecting water vapor into the air to maintain a healthful and comfortable humidity. Common colds, influenza, and other respiratory infections are generally the result of insufficient moisture in home air.

The cold air of winter has only a fraction of the capacity of summer air for moisture. The great outdoors is the only source of our indoor air supply, and when winter air is heated to temperatures of 70 degrees or more, its moisture capacity is correspondingly increased. Hence, there is a shortage of water vapor in the air. The most satisfactory means of overcoming this moisture deficiency is by means of heating systems of the vapor air type. These are equipped with humidifiers which evaporate and automatically inject into the home air the water vapor from 3 to 25 gallons of water daily, as required. In modest homes of 5 or 6 rooms, from 6 to 8 gallons of water should be evaporated daily to adequately humidify the home air. The moisture thus supplied is sufficient to conserve and protect health. Furthermore, moderate temperatures of 68 to 72 degrees will be found to be far more comfortable than the high temperatures and super-dry air that characterize homes heated with old style heating systems.
