The Construction Camp Vanishes

ORDERS FOR MATERIAL PLACED IN LANCASTER, YORK AND HARRISBURG TOTALLED $3,000,000—LABOR WAS LARGELY LOCAL

Workmen are busy removing the camp development of the Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation at this point on the Susquehanna River.

As the temporary construction vanishes with the general cleaning up of the site and the relocation of the road bed of the Columbia and Port Deposit Railroad, the facades of the power house and the architectural features of the mile long dam reveal the thought and careful planning of the company in bringing the design into keeping with the natural beauty of the region.
