Gretna Players One of the most human comedies to be seen on any stage is "The Goose Hangs High," which has been entertaining large audiences this week at the Gretna Theatre, Mt. Gretna. A. E. Scott's Gretna Players can be seen in the production every night for the rest of the week.

The play tells the story of an average American family—father, mother and children. On the surface, the children seem selfish—allowing their parents to sacrifice for them—and allowing them to do without many needed things just 'cause the children wanted them. Then into this family here comes a crisis. The father is out of a job, which means that there is a greatly-reduced income. Some of the children come home from college.

And these young folk—instead of berating their parents, get together and make practical suggestions for the rehabilitation of the family income! Some go to work—every one does his or her share for the family! There is an unexpected ending—and the play closes with everyone wishing they could see it all over again!

Next week's play is "The Misleading Lady," a great stage hit which has been done also in the talkies.

Fight fear, it is the main cause of failure. The greatest discovery a man can make is to find himself.
