At Marietta Theatre

On Wednesday and Thursday, "The Big Broadcast" a romantic comedy set against the background of a radio studio, and featuring many of radio's greatest personalities in company with a cast of screen favorites is to be seen. Bing Crosby, Kate Smith, the Boswell Sisters, the Mills Brothers, Cab Calloway and his Orchestra, Burns & Allen, Arthur Tracy (The Street Singer), and Vincent Lopez and his Orchestra, all of whom have radio audiences numbering millions, are cast with Stuart Erwin, Lela Hyams and other movie players in the picture.

On Friday and Saturday, including a special Saturday Matinee, America's humorist-philosopher, Will Rogers is featured in "Too Busy To Work." He appears in the role of a whimsical tramp, a gum chewing Solomon, who devotes his activities to searching for his wife and daughter and the man who stole them from him. It is said to provide Rogers with unusual opportunities for his whimsicalities. Marion Nixon and Dick Powell have leading roles and other stars in the cast include Frederick Burton, Douglas Cosgrove, Jack O'Hara and Louise Beavers. Also on this program is Chapter No. 6 of the serial, "The Jungle Mystery." Three valuable prizes are given away every Saturday night.

On Monday and Tuesday, one of the most popular mystery stories of fiction is showing at the Marietta Theatre. It is "The Night Club Lady," produced from the popular Anthony Abbot best-seller. Thatcher Colt, famous sleuth, a police commissioner, leading character in the Anthony Abbot series, is played by the suave Adolphe Menjou. How Menjou in this role, solves a chain of murders, makes one of the most absorbing pictures of its kind ever to reach the screen. Mayo Methot, a glamorous blond newcomer, plays the part of the night club lady. Skeets Gallagher heads the brilliant supporting cast.

Some Tart Criticisms of Literature's Great

The awe with which we usually speak of great men was not always shared by their contemporaries. Spivak and tart remarks made by the writing fraternity about their brothers are frequent, and the Golden Book Magazine gives a few samples. "Bryant," remarked Edgar Allan Poe, "is not all a fool. Mr. Willis is not quite an ass. Mr. Longfellow will steal, but perhaps he cannot help it." Sidney Smith remarked of Daniel Webster that he struck him "like a steam engine in trousers," and William Wordsworth said of the Brownings: "So Robert Browning and Miss Barrett tie me some off together, I hope they understand each other—nobody else would." When someone asked Charles Dickens how he liked Wordsworth: "Like him!" roared Dickens. "Not at all; he is a dreadful old ass." And George Moore once observed that reading Conrad was like chewing India rubber.

Vagaries of Spiders

Spiders are cannibals. Members of some species often associate with members of other species, all living together without animosity, apparently, when there is sufficient food for all. Members of other species are intolerant of strangers. Some webs are suited to snare very small and delicate insects that breed in water close to the spiders' dwelling place. Not far from these webs may be seen stout webs that hold heavy insects. Some hunting spiders live in flowers and catch flying insects that sip the flowers' nectar. Other spiders live all their lives under stones, and feed almost exclusively on creatures that crawl. They shun moths and butterflies and other insects that flap their wings.

Unique Work of Art

The little Italian town of Pistoia can pride itself on the by no means insignificant contribution to the engineering eminence of the country, and may take some glory for adding the word "pisto" to the English dictionaries, but its fine and notable ancient buildings are its chief glory, whether secular or ecclesiastical. In any other country town they would be naturally famous but in Italy where so many small towns are similarly glorious, they do not as greatly impress. The visitor should especially seek out the magnificent frieze of the Ospedale del Ceppo, executed by Giovanni della Robbia, representing the Seven Works of Mercy, for this work of art is unique.

Two-Purpose Beast

The alpaca, native of the table lands of Peru, is an important source of wool for the Peruvians and at the same time serves as a beast of burden. The wool when clipped every year, attains a length of about eight inches, although it will grow much longer if left uncut.

It appears to be related to the camels of the Old world, although the resemblance is not so pronounced until the alpacas has been sheared.

Faraday and Edison

Faraday, like Edison, was the son of poor people, and had to fight for his education. He was apprenticed to a bookbinder and so had the chance to read many books. A friend invited him to attend a course of lectures by Sir Humphrey Davy (probably best known for his miner's safety lamp). Davy was then director of the Royal Institution. Faraday took complete notes of the lectures and made careful drawings of all the apparatus used. At the end of the course he sent both notes and drawings to Sir Humphrey Davy requesting a position under him in the Royal Institution. The request was granted and the prince of Nineteenth century researchers was finally launched on his career.—St. Nicholas.
