Passing of Veteran Straphanger Forecast By De-Luxing Passengers

Commuter comfort is now gaining ground in many cities. Here is a de-luxe car recently put into Detroit service.

Below—A straphanger's dream come true. Tastefully upholstered in Chase Velmo, this street car provides a seat for every passenger.

THE straphanger is on the way out! No longer will the tired business man sway gently to and fro in front of the cheap, sticky seat, nor will the weary traveler be cramped in a seat. No longer will tired and reproachful commuters send withering glances at uncomfortable male seat occupants, through the scanty protection afforded by hastily raised newspapers. The passenger is becoming de-luxed!

In Philadelphia, Ralph T. Senter, president of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. has instructed employees to begin being "friendly" with subway, bus and trolley passengers.

In New York City, the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has added a counter car, which looks like a lunch wagon gone high hat and wherein the busy commuter can get a hastily cooked meal

Services were held Saturday. Interment in Marietta cemetery.

Frank C. Musser

Frank C. Musser, extensive car dealer and former mayor of Lancaster city, was found dead in his garage by his wife Monday. Death was caused by monoxide gas. He was sitting in his car and the motor of the car was running. Deceased was 69 years old. Business worries were responsible for his death.

Boyd, Durango, Col.; and two sisters, Mrs. Kate May, of Delta, York county; and Mrs. Harry Miller, Penn township. He was employed as a pattern maker in the Hershey machine and foundry company for thirty-two years and a member of the town council for several years.

Services were held Friday at the home. Interment in Fairview cemetery.

David H. Engle

David H. Engle, aged 80 years, died on Thursday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry C. Zeamer, 302 Chestnut street, Columbia. He had been in ill health for sometime.

Mr. Engle for thirty years prior to his retirement about fourteen years ago was a funeral director and furniture dealer in this borough. For seven years he was the superintendent and his wife was the matron at the Messiah Home for the aged in Harrisburg. Since the death of his wife six years ago he retired from active life and resided alternately at the Messiah Home and at the home of Mrs. Zeamer. Mrs. Engle also died while on a visit to her daughter in Columbia.

Mr. Engle was a member of the Brethren in Christ church, which maintains the Messiah Home, for the past half century.

The survivors are his daughter, Mrs. Minnie M. Zeamer and one son John Engle, of Detroit, Michigan; two grandchildren, Harold Zeamer, a student at Yale University and Miss Charlotte Zeamer, Columbia.

MOUNT JOY CAGERS JOIN COUNTY LEAGUE

The local team will be composed of former high players and will be coached by Lee Ellis, well known athlete.

The following players, who will represent the local team are: Diver, Kreider, Mummat, Beamerderfer, Halbleib, Charles, Derr, Phillips, Diefenderfer, Fackler, Weaver and Coach Ellis.

This same group of players forced West Lampeter to the limit to win by a two point margin on their own court.

Tomato from Peru?

Peru is thought to have been the native home of the tomato, and the natives of that country are known to have grown it since very early times. They called them xitmatas or zitmatas (from which the present word, tomato, has probably been derived. It was not until nearly 150 years after the discovery of America that Europeans became acquainted with the tomato and even after they had known the plant for many years it was used mainly for ornamental purposes, the food value of the fruit being little suspected.

Sheepshead Valuable

The sheepshead, a fish with an unattractive name, is nevertheless one of the most valuable food fish along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. It varies in size from two pounds to 15 pounds. The drum is sometimes called the sheepshead, although this designation is not correct.

The name of the fish comes not from the shape of its head, but rather because of the nature of its teeth, with incisors in front and molars behind. It feeds upon shell fish, for which its grinding teeth are well adapted.

Daniel Sipling

Daniel L. Sipling, Sr., seventy-seven, died early Tuesday morning from the effects of poison he swallowed late Monday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harvey Saunders, of Marietta, R. D. 1.

Dr. G. A. Harter, of Maytown, was called after the aged man's act was discovered but the physician was unable to save him. The victim, who was subject to fits of despondency, said he "wanted to die." Man's Need of Women

By women, poets are ruled. Women give an age its color; not because they themselves are omnipotent, but because men, being children first and last, see their gods through women and have no peace but at the breast and no imagination of rebirth but in the similitude of a womb. Solitary men are like cut flowers in a pot; they are beautiful but they wither; being without nourishment; yet if man consent to be nourished of woman, he, like a flower, is rooted and held; there is no escape until his earth receives him again.—From "The Fountain," by Charles Morgan.

Chinese Junks Launched With Great Ceremony

Unless history be at fault, the Chinese were pioneers in breasting tempestuous seas to carry their commercial enterprises to far lands. The Chinese have held with astonishing faithfulness to many of their ancient religious practices. In a Portuguese work translated into English in 1579, it is found this fairly full account of what the Chinese then did when they launched their ocean-going junks: "When they launched their ships into the sea at the first making, the priests so appeared with long garments, being of very rich silk, to make their sacrifices in the poots of them, where the place of prayer is, and they offered burned them before their idols with certain ceremonies that they make, and sing songs with an unorderly tone, sounding certain little bells. They worship the devil, where they have him painted in the fore-part of the ship, because, as they say, he should do no hurt to the ships. In all this discourse they are eating and drinking at discretion."—From the Grace Log.

Masterpieces Not Free From Humorous Errors

Among famous errors of noted men, the Golden Book Magazine notes that in Vandyke's celebrated picture of Charles I in armor, both gauntlets are for the right hand.

Then there is that passage from "Robinson Crusoe": "I resolved, if possible, to get to the ship, so I pulled off my clothes and took to the water . . . and by the help of a rope got into the fore-castle of the ship . . . I found that all the ship's provisions were dry; and being well disposed to eat, I went to the bread room and filled my pockets with biscuit." The various nautical collocations would no doubt be grateful for Defoe's explanation of how this feat was accomplished.

Count Hermann Keyserling, who was not the author of "How to Tell the Birds From the Wild Flowers," is responsible for the following: "The Junco is a thickset and its fauna, in general, is rich and luxuriant, rather than important as regards its individual plants."

Solitary Islanders

Unfortunately located for any ship lands, the island of Tristan da Cunha, the largest and only inhabited of a group of three islands in the middle of the South Atlantic ocean, is regarded as the loneliest place in the British empire. It was named for a Portuguese admiral who discovered the island in 1506.

Months, and sometimes a year, pass without a ship calling there. People on the island have only a population of 100—no mail and newspapers for a long time as a result. Their food supply grows woefully short and they live on the barest means the soil and sea can furnish.

Agate Easily Polished

The agate, once highly prized by the ancients because of the beauty of the coloring, can be brought to brilliant color and polish by boiling in a sirup and then in an acid. The resultant colors are beautiful. The agate is fairly widely distributed in the world, being found in Egypt, Scotland, Germany, South America, the United States and in other parts of the world. The moss type is found in Wyoming and Nevada, while the banded type is found in quantity along Lake Superior. Large specimens of the banded type are also plentifully distributed in Texas.

PENNA. FARM HANDS AVERAGE $19 MONTHLY

Farm hands in Pennsylvania at the beginning of the year were being paid an average of $19 a month with board or $32 a month without.

A department of agricultural survey of farm wages throughout the country showed that Pennsylvania hands were getting better-than-average-pay.

A superabundance of labor was available, supply being 200 per cent of demand. Demand was only 66 per cent of normal demand.

Some people spoil the effect of a good deed by being so self-righteous about it.
