TWO MARIETTA FIREMEN EXTINGUISH MAYTOWN FIRE

Rivalry has always existed between county fire companies but a new wrinkle developed at Maytown when the home of William Myers caught fire. Thomas Johnson discovered the blaze and ran to the Maytown firehouse. There wasn't a fireman in sight and he didn't know how to operate the truck, so he hailed a passing car containing 2 youths, and the three drove to the Myers home on the Maytown fire truck. The two youths raised the ladders and climbed to the roof. Then, to the dismay of the crowd, the two youths pulled the fire ladders up after them and calmly went about extinguishing the flames, which were confined to the chimney. Later the two strangers explained they were Joseph Rutherford and Harry Campbell, of the Marietta fire company and they did not want the Maytown firemen to get credit for fighting the blaze.

Easter Lilies Are Blooming In Quaint Bermuda Gardens

EASTER lilies are now in full bloom in Bermuda and the whole country is a great checkerboard of white fields against verdant patches of native cedar. The oleanders are also now in bloom, winding in seemingly endless pink hedges across the landscape. In recent years lily perfume has been made on the islands, and feminine visitors may carry back fitting remembrances of Bermuda's charm at Eastertide. Because of the great beauty of Bermuda at this time of the year, it has become very popular as an Easter resort for families. Children are out of school a week or two, and when they vacation in Bermuda, a booking in the warm sun and bathing in the invigorating waters, they return to school with new vitality to take up their studies.

What Penna's Governor Says

(From page 1) dollars and nine cents for each Pennsylvania. Compare these figures and you have a comparison of the cost of government of the Pennsylvania Government compared with the United States, New York and New Jersey. City government cannot be compared with Federal or State Governments because in congested districts there are certain necessary services, such as, police, fire protection and streets. Nevertheless it is interesting to note that the budget of the city of Philadelphia calls for a per capita expenditure in the fiscal year ending in 1934 of $41.75. My budget for the state of Pennsylvania, besides providing for that tremendous savings of $60,000,000 in two years, made provision for maintaining at a high point of efficiency every necessary government service. In addition my plan provided means of relieving local taxpayers of the payment of $50,000,000 in the next two years, besides finding $20,000,000 revenue for unemployment relief without any new taxes. I have repeatedly pointed out to the General Assembly and to the people the details of this economy program. One of the most important parts of that plan was the taking over by the Commonwealth of all of the remaining township roads. That legislation alone would relieve the farmer of $18,000,000 in road taxes in the next two years. How has it been possible to cut $30,000,000 per year from the cost of the Government of Pennsylvania? The answer is simple. We have simply demanded that no money be spent that is not absolutely necessary to spend. We have stopped constructing buildings, although many of our institutions sorely need new buildings. We have eliminated overlapping work of bureaus and departments. We have dismissed employees whose services were not absolutely necessary to the state. We have cut down traveling expenses to an absolute minimum. We have cut down long distant telephone calls and telegraph messages to an emergency basis. We have established a rule that no letters may be written when a postcard will suffice. We have eliminated all unnecessary printing. We have stopped the use of expensive engraved stationery in favor of the cheapest and plainest that will answer the purpose. We have effected economies wherever it is possible to save a cent. Many of those small savings may not seem important but added together day after day, week after week they amount to huge sums. This economy program was worked out after months of investigation. We cut here and slashed there. That economy program for the 1933-1935 biennium, Pennsylvania will have the sanest, most economical, and most efficient government during that period that the people of the Commonwealth have ever enjoyed.

HEALTH TALK WRITTEN BY DR. THEODORE B. APPEL, SECRETARY OF HEALTH "There are a great many persons who habitually assume a last resort attitude toward the bedroom. For these people business, recreation and the indulgences of life all maintain a priority over sleep. If will power and inclinations were the controlling forces of existence, such a position, might be justified. Unfortunately, however, such is not the case," states Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health. "In spite of man's progress and great scientific achievements, the fact remains that so far as his body is concerned, he is just as dictatorially controlled by nature as he was in the Garden of Eden. Old Dame Nature at that time established some very definite laws regarding bodily requirements; and while of course she gives man his head as to his obedience to them, she invariably exacts her price if her mandates are consistently violated. "Only the other day, for instance, a learned scientist whose intellect was the envy and admiration of many, so forget first principles that he worked day and night developing a mathematical formula. A sudden breakdown was the result. And in forty-eight hours he was dead. "While this is an uncommon case, it nevertheless typifies the general snubbing that nature receives by many who in their absurd conceit imagine that the basic living rules can be habitually broken without penalty. "Sleep is one of the prime essentials in the animal kingdom and this is true whether the animal be a cat, a dog, or well educated man. "Of course there is a very limited number of persons who thrive on less sleep than others. However, generally speaking, the majority of mature people require eight hours of sleep each night. And younger persons—many of whom, alas, do not get it—require more. "It may be somewhat of a blow to one's pride, but it will be a boon to one's life, to realize that nature, and not man, possesses the final authority on the sleep question."

MUST TIE DOGS Persons who own dogs must keep them tied, the Game Commission announced. Officials said that dogs destroy many small game birds and animals during the breeding season if they are not properly controlled.
