In Memoriam
In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Irvin I. Geistweil, who departed this life one year ago Aug. 10, 1932.
'Tis lonesome here without you,
And sad the weary way,
For life is not the same to us,
Since you were called away.
We never shall forget the day,
You left us all alone.
It seems that when you went away—
The sunshine left our home.
We miss your kind and willing hand,
Your sweet and loving care.
We miss you everywhere.
We miss you everywhere.

The Lancaster Auto Club

Although forty miles per hour is the legal speed limit in Pennsylvania there are many instances in which this speed is excessive and the driver subject to arrest and fine, according to the Lancaster Automobile Club. Many municipalities are prosecuting speeders under Section 1002, sub-section A of the motor code, which limits operators to "a careful and prudent speed" at all times. The Club quoted this section as follows:
Any person driving a vehicle on the highway shall drive the same at a careful and prudent speed, not greater than nor less than is reasonable and proper, having due regard to the traffic, surface and width of the highway, and of any other restrictions or conditions than and there existing; and no person shall drive any vehicle upon a highway at such a speed as to endanger the life, limb or property of any person, nor at a speed greater than will permit him to bring the vehicle to a stop within the assured clear distance ahead.
"There are many instances in both city and county driving where forty miles per hour is neither prudent nor careful," said S. Edward Gable, president of the Club.
Despite posted warnings many motorists fail to slow down when men are working along the highway, and these same drivers pay little or no heed to school signs and speed limit warnings. Such as these not only endanger their own lives, but jeopardize the safety of others.
In fact the whole crux of safety on city streets and rural highways rests on the above quoted provisions of the motor code, for it sets up a standard of driving that recognizes the forty-mile speed limit only as a maximum and places on the shoulders of the driver the responsibility of judging what speed is "careful and prudent" under each and every one of the varying conditions on streets and highways.
Motorists of Lancaster County should be familiar with this section of the law and obey it."

What Penna's Governor Says

available to see to it that the workers were not prevented from exercising their rights as citizens.
When I sent the State Police to Lansdale under the Lansdale agreement, and when I sent the State Police to Fayette County, I gave them plain orders that they must interfere with the citizens' right of free speech, free assembly, and legal picketing. They were sent to guarantee these rights, not to deny them.
In Lansdale the Union leaders agreed to picket only with officers of the Union and workers of the territory affected, to prevent violence by their members, to practice only peaceful and legal picketing, and to cooperate with the State Police in maintaining order.
In the bituminous strike area the United Mine Workers of America agreed to appoint five per cent of the membership of each local Union as Union guides to keep order and police marches and meetings. The Union also agreed to prevent parades at night, to prevent any action that might result in bodily harm or destruction of property, and not to block highways or entrances to properties or intimidate non-strikers.
Plans to prevent disorder could not have succeeded without the full cooperation of the responsible leaders of the strikers.
Incidentally, the Union officials helped their own cause immensely by thus agreeing to try to win their fight over the conference table and not through riot and blood shed.
Of course, there were some few erratic outbursts and disorder where hot-headed strikers and strike sympathizers refused to follow their leaders. But they were far overshadowed by unwarranted attacks on strikers by company-controlled deputy sheriffs trying to break up the strike.
In the end, however, common sense prevailed over violence and bloodshed. Common sense, as we understand it, requires a proper respect for the rights of the workers, a proper respect for the rights of the employers, and cooperation instead of attempted intimidation by the peace officers, and especially by company-owned deputy sheriffs.

IF YOU WANT GOOD TEETH-

By DR. J. M. WISAN
Chairman, Council on Mouth Hygiene, New Jersey State Dental Society
TEETH MUST NOT BE NEGLECTED
THE White House Conference on Child Health in its report, announced that more than 90 per cent of American children suffer with dental defects. Naturally one wonders why, with all this information concerning the prevention and control of dental disease being presented, this percentage remains so high.
Is this condition due to ignorance, indifference or lack of funds? Are parents unaware that giving the children proper foods such as milk, fruits and vegetables protects teeth? Do they realize that early and regular dental care will avoid many dental abnormalities? Do they know these things? Are they unconvinced of the importance of teeth? Or indifferent?
Perhaps dietary habits, formed before these facts had been proved, are difficult to overcome.
Of course, the question of economics enters into this subject. Many parents feel that they cannot afford to buy the necessary foods or to provide dental treatment. Where families are actually indigent and poverty stricken the community should step in—children should not be allowed to grow up with undernourished or mal-nourished bodies. The community will find that it will cost much more to maintain institutions for the care of neglected children than it would to help them maintain their health at this time.
Since it is known that many systemic diseases can be traced to dental infections, teeth must not be neglected. In as much as more than ninety per cent of our children are affected by dental disease it does seem best that the community should step in and provide clinics for indigent children, particularly now when so many families cannot possibly obtain dental treatment. A very excellent example of interest in the public health was shown by the Union County Dental Health Society in sending a letter to all the Boards of Education in Union County, urging them to maintain school dental clinics so that the children of poor families would not be deprived of dental treatment.
Certainly parents who are aware should adopt the necessary measures to protect their children's health and official agencies should do what they can for the children of their communities. Such cooperation would bring about marked improvement in dental health.
