People read weekly newspaper ads before they read circulars, or any such advertising.

A person glancing over a circular invariably throws it into the stove or waste basket when thru.

Newspaper ads are oftentimes read by every member of the family. THESE ARE FACTS. THINK THEN ACT

Last Member of Court of Mad Empress Is Dead

Kansas City, Mo.—Death of Mrs. Kate Kentling, ninety-six, at Springfield, Mo., recently brought to an end the tragedy and misery which resulted from Emperor Maximilian's ill-fated attempt to establish a monarchy in Mexico nearly 70 years ago.

Mrs. Kentling went from Austria to Mexico as lady in waiting to the Empress Carlota and the bride of William Heide, handmaster to the emperor. The handmaster was injured during an earthquake just before the final collapse of the regime and the couple after great hardships made their way to New Orleans and then to St. Louis.

The handmaster died there as a result of his injuries and the young widow married Frank Kentling, a book-keeper. They established a store in the Ozark town of Highland, Mo., and reared eight children, several of whom served in the army during the World War. She was the last survivor of the Maximilian court.

Rock Hunters a Pest

Excelsior Springs, Mo.—Construction of rock gardens and fish ponds has become such a fad here that Police Chief William Payne issued a recent edict against digging rocks from high ways. It was necessary to delegate a special patrolman to enforce the rule for a number of days.

Rode Reds 1,000 Miles

Boston.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Deansmore and two small daughters, the youngest only six months old, arrived at the home of relatives here after riding more than 1,000 miles on freight cars and hitch-hiking the rest of the way from El Paso, Texas.

Grade the Pullet

When pullets are housed for the winter be sure to grade them according to maturity. If small, immature pullets that are laying, they do not have an opportunity for proper development.

Guinea Pigs—Pro and Con

THOSE hundred million or so friendly little guinea pigs, without which we mere humans would hardly be able to get along, are again the subject of controversy in the current news. The controversy started recently when Arthur Kallet and F. J. Schlink came into the spotlight with the publication of their book, "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs."

The Purpose

"This book is intended not only to report dangerous and largely unsuspected conditions affecting the health and safety of all consumers of foods, drugs, and cosmetics, but also, so far as possible, to give the consumer some measure of defense against such conditions. To this end, the authors have stated their case in terms of brand or trade names wherever possible, irrespective of the size or prominence of the manufacturer of the food, drug, cosmetic, or other product involved, or of the popularity of the product."

A recent article in Printers' Ink by Raymond Pearl, of Johns Hopkins University, while admitting that there are quacks and rascals in some of these industries, contains an interesting discussion of the book pointing out that these quacks and rascals do not constitute the whole population, and that while the Federal Food and Drugs Act could and should be greatly improved, he maintains that it is unlikely that much progress will be made toward its improvement "by any such intemperate methods as some of those advocated by the present authors in the final chapters of their book."

To present the argument from both sides of the fence, we quote Mr. Pearl: "The uninformed and careless reader is likely to get the impression that there are few if any advertised foods, drugs, or cosmetics that escape a deserved castigation."

High Standard Maintained

"This kind of expositor technique does not give a fair picture of the actual case. It neglects certain highly important considerations of which we have space to mention here only two, namely: first, that the great bulk of manufactured foods of all kinds achieve and maintain a remarkably high standard of quality and purity, all things considered, and are sold at reasonable prices, having regard to their cost of production and marketing (as is evidenced, for example, by the wide range of canned foods of unimpeached quality sold by the great grocery store chains); second, that for something like two decades past practically every important branch of the food industry (manufacturing) in this country has been aggressively educating and policing its own membership, not for the purpose of devising new ways to cheat the consumer, but upon the sound theory that honesty is the best policy, and that the security of the industry can best be insured by improving the quality and lowering the cost of the product, both of which results have been accomplished to a really remarkable degree, as any honest man who can remember conditions of from thirty to forty years ago can testify."

Steamer Baskets

A STEAMER basket is a joy for ever so long, or something to stealthily slip to the maid because you can't use it, depending on what foresight friends ashore have given to this popular bon voyage gift. If it is packed with fresh fruit which the dining-room on ocean liners provides most generously, if it is filled with boxes of chocolate—or anything else that doesn't keep perfectly—it is just that much extra luggage.

"How Thoughtful!"

Suppose instead we pack a most acceptable basket for our cruising friends. There are so many delicious new crackers and cocktail wafers that come in cans and stay delightfully crisp for the whole voyage, that you can choose between Scotch shortbreads, civar puffs, assorted biscuit dainties, fruited oat cakes, cheese wafers, toasty whole wheat wafers, arrowroot jumbles, or what you will. While no one bothers to make sandwiches, there are always times when tins of civar or anchovies, pimiento or cream cheese are welcome with these crisp crackers and cocktails. And speaking of cocktails, canned grapefruit juice, sweetened or unsweetened, has become almost a necessity to use in cocktails while traveling, and pineapple juice is equally good for many drinks.

Pack in also some cans of candy, which will keep fresh and good, and also cans of assorted glacé fruits and nuts.

Careful Attention Required
Dairy cows demand good management during the fall. With the short pastures or grass injured by frost, more feed will be needed. Protection from cold winds and rains also is desirable if the cows are to be maintained in flesh and good production.

Is a stable government one in which the stable is locked before the horse is stolen?

THE ROAD TO FAME
He longed to find the way to Fame but not a highway bore that name. He thought to glory there must be, a level path that he could see, but every road to which he came, possessed a terrifying name. He never thought that fame might lurk, along that dreary path called work. He never thought to go and see what marked the road called Industry... Because it seemed so rough and high he passed the road to SERVICE by. Yet, had he taken either way, he might have come to FAME some day. Phil Oophy
