

FOR YOUR INSPECTION

The merchant and manufacturer who advertise, actually are placing their merchandise before you for inspection. They invite your most critical attention and an uncompromising comparison.

And their advertisements, so to speak, say to their products: "We have introduced you to the public—now stand on your own merits."

If the manufacturer and merchant did not have confidence in their wares, they would hesitate to call attention to them. For advertising rigidly tests the maker, the seller and the merchandise.

Business so tested, and found not wanting, is prosperous.

In the long run, you can depend on the man who advertises, as well as on his product. That is one reason why people have found that it pays to read advertisements.

It is through advertising that the excellent things of the world are brought to the attention of those who are seeking for the best and most economical way to spend their money.

Read the advertisements. They are news.

HEALTH TALK

WRITTEN BY DR. THEODORE B. APPEL, SECRETARY OF HEALTH

"A gentleman was recently brought into a doctor's office suffering from extreme nervousness. He was pale, had deep hollows under his eyes and was suffering from extreme fatigue. During the course of the examination it was discovered that, his day's duties done, he would habitually read far into the night. He was a book fiend. Sleep was secondary to the pleasure he got from reading. However, his body did not at all feel the same way about it. In short, he was a sleep robber. Unfortunately there are thousands who are in his class," states Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health.

"These days, too many persons are willing to go where the spirit leads them rather than to follow the path (and a broad one at that) laid down by nature. In fact, as indicated by the above case, one does not need to join the whoopee and night-club groups to lose regular rest and sleep decreed by nature. There are many persons who pride themselves on their personal, and not infrequently, their puritanical conduct, who are just as foolish regarding the essential sleep factor as their more lively brothers.

"It would seem therefore that the old adage, too much of a good thing is too much, can apply to such worthy and stimulating activities as reading and radioing. In fact, sleep starvation directly traceable to an over-indulgence in these and similar fascinating recreations is more general than is suspected, even by those who are the victims.

"Most certainly there is a comparatively small class of persons who can get along with a minimum amount of sleep. To such people six hours a night apparently are ample, and possibly actually so. However, by far the majority of adults need eight hours sleep regularly and others need even more.

"It follows that within reasonable limits each individual is more or less a law unto himself respecting sleep. The point is that if seven hours keeps one healthy it would be foolish to take more, and by the same token if seven hours is too little it is foolish not to take eight.

"Once a person determines the amount of sleep required then it should be considered by him to be a very definite obligation to his body to obtain it. Robbing one's self of the necessary sleep by reading, bridge playing or any other form of innocent recreation may satisfy one's conscience, but it will not satisfy one's body."

A FRIENDLY DISCUSSION

"Are you going to Epworth League meeting at Cookman church this Sunday, Joe?" called Jack from the neighboring yard.

"Yes, I'm going this week," came the reply. "I heard that George Barefoot is going to lead, and Irvin Yeager is to be the assistant. I think it should be a pretty good meeting, don't you?"

"They usually do have good meetings. Do you know what the topic is for this week?"

"Yes, I read it in the Broadcaster. They are going to discuss 'What Can We Do To Make Our Meetings More Interesting?' I like to go to their meetings because you can feel free to express any ideas you might have."

"Well, I must bring up some coal for my mother now. I'll stop for you Sunday evening. Remember, the meeting starts at six-thirty." Jack picked up the coal bucket and disappeared into the cellar.

POULTRY

VACCINATION WILL CHECK POX LOSSES

Plan Recommended to Owners of Diseased Flocks.

Vaccinating young chickens against chicken pox is now a proven way for farmers to protect the cash income from poultry, according to the laboratory of animal pathology and hygiene, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Poultry and eggs now bring in about 11 per cent of the cash income of Illinois farmers, but the total would be even higher were it not for the inroads of chicken pox and other barriers to the production of high quality products, it was pointed out. The disease also is known as canker sore mouth or avian diphtheria.

Routine vaccination is recommended to all owners of flocks on infected premises as a result of a two years' study by the laboratory. Either fowl pox or pigeon pox vaccine can be used. It was demonstrated that there is no danger of causing chicken pox by using pigeon pox vaccine. Occasional, however, serious results follow the use of fowl pox vaccine. It also was found that unhealthy flocks are not good subjects for immunization with pigeon pox vaccine. Complete protection was not established in all flocks vaccinated with the pigeon pox product in 1932, but in general the results were satisfactory.

Vaccination should be restricted to flocks in which the disease occurred during the previous year. All fowls vaccinated with fowl pox vaccine should be placed in voluntary quarantine for two months. Chickens suffering from any other disease should not be vaccinated.

Polish Fowls Are Good for Show and Utility

Leading in number of varieties of Continental-European poultry are the Polish fowls—White Crested Black, Silver, White, Buff-Laced, Non-Bearded Golden, Silver and White and Bearded Golden. Except for the lack of a "beard" or "whiskers" represented by feathers on the throat, the non-bearded are the same as the bearded in all other standard requirements. All the Polish varieties have an unusual appeal to the chicken fancier and a backyard farmer may be attracted first to such fowls by their unusual plumage, although they really have utility value.

There is considerable doubt about the origin of the Polish fowl, although it probably originated in Poland. Dutch poultry fanciers in the Eighteenth century were instrumental in perfecting the breed. In type, the Polish is much like the Leghorn. It was formerly very common in the United States, but with the increase in the popularity of the Leghorn, interest in the Polish waned, although it still holds a place as an ornamental fowl.—Los Angeles Times.

Feed Wheat by Hand

Feeding of corn and oats and laying mash in hoppers and hand-feeding wheat at the rate of four to six pounds per hundred hens daily, is a new method of feeding that promises to be practical for corn-belt farms, states Paul G. Riley, Indiana poultryman. The wheat is higher in price than other grains, and when hoppers-fed is likely to be used in too heavy proportions to other grains. An added advantage in hand-feeding is that the hens will keep the litter stirred up, whereas it is likely to be packed down in houses where hoppers-feeding is practiced exclusively.—Prairie Farmer.

Connecticut for Turkeys

Turkey raising in Connecticut is increasing, the total on farms in 1932 being more than double 1929, and with a farm value of about $200,000. A better understanding of turkey sanitation has made increases in number possible, and a sound marketing program brought added profit. The state, through its agricultural department, has established grading, labeling and advertising of Connecticut turkeys, giving them a market standing not before possessed.—Rural New-Yorker.

Poultry Facts

One poultry farm in Kent county, Mich., sold an entire carload of hens for market.

The Barred Plymouth Rock, a distinctly American bird, first introduced 86 years ago, is today among the leaders of dual-purpose breeds.

Non-singing breeds usually lay at eighteen weeks and heavy-sitting breeds at from five and one-half to six months.

Safety first practices in raising chicks are to use litter free from mold and change it at least twice a week; to use clean wash hoppers and water fountains placed on wire platforms; and to remove the cockerels as soon as possible.

Nothing can be done to cure diseases of the liver because the bird must be killed to discover the trouble. Enlarged livers are believed to result from over feeding and lack of exercise. Old or musty and impure water contribute to liver troubles.

Celery Requires Cold Celery keeps best in storage at 32 degrees Fahrenheit. Well-grown celery, free from injury, may be stored for 3 or 4 months if kept constantly just above the freezing temperature with the tops dry and the roots moist.
