OUTSTANDING SUCCESS OF ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH

The outstanding success of the new Atlantic White Flash Plus once again demonstrates the power of newspaper advertising to create sales when coupled with a good product, according to Joseph R. Rollins, Director of Publicity of The Atlantic Refining Company.

"We are particularly pleased," Mr. Rollins said today, "because it justifies our faith along two lines: first, that under the New Deal the Public is willing and eager to buy when it is offered new and unusual values; and second, that the best way to let the public know about these new values is through the newspapers.

"We anticipated that this new motor fuel would be successful, because it gives motorists so many premium qualities at no extra cost—qualities such as the same anti-knock fluid formerly used only in premium-priced gasolines. But we had no idea that the product's success would be as great as it is.

"Sales during the first week were far beyond our expectations. Given time, a good product can often make itself known to the public solely by having those who use it tell their friends about its excellence. But this procedure is much too slow in fast-moving days like these.

"With the new Atlantic White Flash Plus, we are getting not only this word-of-mouth publicity, but the tremendous additional stimulus of the greatest advertising campaign ever launched by Atlantic in its 68 years of existence. The combination has carried the story of the new fuel to literally millions of motorists, and has brought an amazing percentage of them to Atlantic pumps to try the new fuel for themselves."
