Blunt Noses Make Best Streamlines

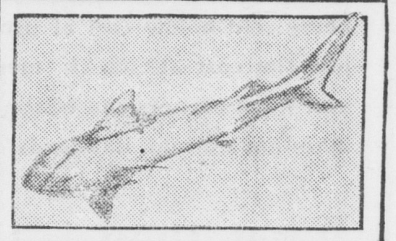

(Above) New Curtiss all-metal monoplane designed for Army Air Corps. Note the speed ring or shield around the short, blunt nose which cuts down the "air-drag."

(Above) Model of auto for 1934 showing aerodynamic streamlining, with short nose and complete weight redistribution. Passengers sit between wheels, not over them.

(Above) The Navy, too is going in for streamlines and blunt noses in these V-type submarines, incorporating sensational new engineering advances.

(Right) Of all fast moving objects stream-lined by Nature with the blunt nosed rain-drop design, one of the swiftest is the terrible shark, which is credited with speeds of around 100 miles an hour.

For centuries people have naturally thought that sharp-nosed objects would cleave the air and water with less resistance than blunt-nosed ones. This seemed so reasonable that until recent years no one even bothered to experiment to ascertain scientifically if the idea were true. To the amazement of the first experimenters, it was discovered that a sharp-nose creates more resistance for a moving object than almost any other shape. A broad front, which tapers toward the rear—the natural shape of the shark or the whale—is the one which creates the least resistance. Nature discovered this long ago in her own engineering experiments. Man is only now applying the principle to his own transportation problems.

"What Could I Do?"

Patricia Ellis, movie actress, like thousands of other persons, finds herself confronted with the problem of where to ride her bicycle. She tried it on the grass and a cop appeared with a ticket. With the entire country again taking up bicycle riding, it would seem special paths should be set off for the cyclists.

"YE CRITICS"

You with the critical eye—
Try watching yourself pass by.
Have you done your bit
To help mankind;
Or censored others
With fault to find?
Did you give your lift
To boost the load?
Have you helped a friend
O'er a rough road?
Do you live just right—
Refrain from vice?
Does your past record
Show up right nice?
Unless you're immune
From worldly sin,
Check up on yourself
When you begin.
No life is perfect;
Though high or low—
Don't judge another
Until you know.

—Marjorie Cathart

Advise Owners To Get New Tags

(From page 1)

RVG-2. It can be obtained without charge from any motor club notary public or justice of the peace. It also can be had at the bureau in Harrisburg.

Need Title Now

Assignments of certificate of title on new cars, with request for 1934 tags, cannot be accepted at this time, the bureau advises. Persons who have purchased a new car should apply for a transfer of their 1933 registration plates in order to operate legally until the 1934 plates are valid.

Hundreds of applications for 1934 tags have been returned to the bureau with the explanation that those receiving them had sold their cars. In many cases the name and address of the purchaser is given, with the information that the car was sold some months ago.

These persons are operating with 1933 license plates on an automobile for which they hold no certificate of title or transfer of registration, Director H. Richard Stichel said today. Such cases are being investigated by the State Highway Patrol with instructions to make arrests for operating in violation of the State Vehicle Code.

The fee for transfer of registration plates is $2. Motorists operating without a certificate of title or a transfer of registration are advised to comply with the law at once.

TIMELY WORD PUZZLE

Those who find amusement in solving puzzles should enjoy this one. After you solve it (no, we are not going to give the answer) you can spring it on your family or friends. All we are going to give you is just one little sentence of four little words: "Tis to love ruin." Now your job is to make one word out of the letters (all of them) in those four words. Can you do it? No? Well, perhaps if we tell you there are lots of "them" in Cuba right now, that will help you find the solution.
