All Dressed Up And Everywhere To Go

If you are one of the thousands now riding bicycles in this country, you can rest assured there are attractive and appropriate costumes for every section in which you may enjoy the sport. At the top are linen outfits popular in the South, featured by L. Bamberger & Co., Newark, N. J. At the bottom are creations designed for the cooler weather of the North. Left, knitted sports dress as featured by Bloomingdale Bros., Inc., New York City. Right, divided skirt of flecked tweed with twin sweaters, introduced by Gimbel Bros., New York City. You need a bicycle costume to complete your wardrobe.

Hollywood Approves New Streamline Designs

(Below) View snapped in Hollywood of one of the new stream-lined cars which engineers say will soon make all the square-toppers obsolete. Notice particularly the comparative shortness of the nose, when measured with the total length of the tonneau. Long noses will soon cease to be a sign of speed or power. And Hollywood approves the smartness, as who wouldn't? (R.K.O.)

Model automobile tested by the U. S. Bureau of Standards, which proved to have much less air and wind resistance than a model of the cars currently produced. Notice elimination of fenders, the sinking of wheels in the body (U. S. Bureau of Standards).

People who know, including alike the scientists, the designers, and the world of smart fashion, are all predicting the near approach of streamlining in automobiles.

Streamlining has been used in airplanes for several years, the present top speeds of the trans-continental transports—and also the low fares—have only been made possible by 100 per cent streamlining which reduced wind resistance, hence cut power consumption, increased speed and riding comfort. The railroads are now seizing on this new science, and several lines promise stream-lined trains to travel 100 miles an hour.

Automobiles have joined the procession. New cars will soon be seen with blunt noses, sloping tonneaus, wheels buried in the body. Long noses will soon be only a sign of the old-fashioned wind-fighters, which labored to push the air as a mole does the earth.

PRICES today are below
"sea-level", if we may be permitted to use the phrase as a simile for par.

They're actually "sub" prices in the sense that many commodities, and principally the necessities of life, are being sold below cost of production, or at least below the cost at which merchants, manufacturers and wage-earners can continue to produce them and maintain normal standards of living.

What, then, is the inevitable result? Prices must come "up for air" ... national and individual prosperity demands it and the upturn is immediately in the offing.

Today's prices are depression prices. They can only be compared with prices during other periods of depression of past years... they cannot remain in this country any more than depression can continue in a country so basically prosperous in resources, in enterprise, in wealth, in commercial and industrial leadership.

These are conditions which will, and are already, adjusted themselves... by inevitable laws of economics.

We've reached the low... and at the low is the time to buy. With Food, Clothing, Furniture and almost everything else at the lowest prices in 15 years; with the purchasing power of your dollar greater today by 40% to 100% than at any time since the war surely it's time to stock up... even to buy beyond your immediate needs because unless you buy now, or very soon, you're surely going to pay more... when prices come "up for air."
