

You Can Depend On The Man Who Advertises

NINE times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only—but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell it if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

One of our very intelligent Juniors was late for school Monday. When he did get there one of the Profs asked, "What made you oversleep this morning?" The diligent Junior answered, "There are eight of us in the house, but the alarm was set only for seven."

The old fashioned bandit recorded his killings by cutting notches in his gun. The modern gunman keeps a newspaper file.

"Saw little Johnny coming out of Hershey's Barber Shop and I said, 'Did you get your hair cut?' And Johnny replied, 'No, I just washed it and it shrank.'"

Matrimony is a serious word, says a domestic science lecturer. He is wrong—matrimony is a sentence.

A Papa from Salunga said to his daughter, "What made young Hershey stay so late last night, Tillie?" Tillie replied, "I was showing him some of my picture postcards."

And Dad said, "Well, the next time he comes, show him some of my electric light bills."

The Modern Version
Mary had a little lamb,
Quite meek and cross;
Away back on their honeymoon,
She showed him who was boss.

Two students from a nearby college were uncertainly flivvering their way home.
"Bill," said Henry, "I wancha be very careful. Firs' thing ya know you'll have us in a ditch."
"Me?" said Bill, astonished, "Why, I thought you was driving."

An out of town party called the High School and asked, "Hello, is this the Girl Reserves?"
Thinking it was a call for a basket ball game, the teacher replied, "yes."
And the party said, "Well, reserve me a nice blonde for Thursday night."

A Florin woman inquired, "Why do you liken that man to a busy bee? He isn't particularly industrious, is he?"
Her husband answered, "Oh no, he isn't that. But nearly everyone he touches gets stung."

At last we have learned that the reason so few men go to church is, they don't care particularly what other men wear.
Now ladies control yourselves.

Joe Detweiler nicknamed his girl Appendix, and when I asked him why, Joe replied, "Because it costs so much to take her out."

Here's a brand new proposal written by a Rheems barber to be used by barbers only:
Dear One,

HAIR I COMB bringing a MESSAGE of love. It's a SINGE that I'd LATHER have you than all the girls in the world. I'm your devoted SHAVE forever and ever. Every day LILAC the SHOP and hurry to our little HONE with the honeysuckles all around it. We'll RAZOR little one to be a great man. We'll FACIAL our troubles with a song in our hearts, and this is no IDLE TALC.

A new wife was trying a sample that had been left at her door and she said, "The directions say to rub the surface down with steel wool. What on earth is steel wool?"
Her hubby, not wishing to appear dumb, answered, "I'm not sure, but I think it's made from the fleece of hydraulic rams."

To make the world safe for pedestrians the greatest of all horticultural feats has not yet been accomplished—the grafting of Weed chaim on banana skins. A WISE OWL

A burglar who robbed a house in town smoked several cigarettes and scattered ashes on the carpet. The only clue the police have to his identity is that he is unmarried.

POULTRY

LAYING HENS NEED WARM, DRY HOUSE

Idle Buildings Can Be Made Into Good Quarters.

Chickens last year brought Illinois farmers almost as much cash income as cattle and calves did and more than corn, wheat or oats, but they need a "new deal" in housing accommodations, now that another winter is coming on, it is pointed out by E. G. Johnson, extension specialist in agricultural engineering, college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

This "new deal" need not necessarily mean a new house, however. Many poultry houses already built may be remodeled to incorporate the features and to provide the advantages of the more modern type poultry house. In many cases idle buildings already on the farm can be made into efficient poultry houses by making a few simple changes.

The exterior may not look like a poultry house, but if the remodeled building has proper window arrangement in the front for light and ventilation, low ceiling height, a dry floor and tight walls with insulation behind roosts, it will probably be very satisfactory in every way.

Abnormal temperature changes in the poultry house during the winter cut into egg production, and methods of construction that will keep a more uniform temperature are desirable. This can be accomplished by allowing a small amount of head room in the house, making the walls tight, providing insulation back of and above roosts and providing windows that fit tightly. Everything possible also should be done to prevent damp floors in poultry houses.

Narrow houses can be made more satisfactory and the capacity increased by widening the house. This is usually done by extending the house the necessary width and using a gable or combination roof. Houses with a high ceiling may be remodeled by making a false ceiling. The straw loft serves excellently for this purpose. The common method of remodeling semi-modern types of hen and poult houses to avoid the oldness and draftiness usually found in this type of construction is to use a straw loft to shut off the effect of the upper row of windows that cause the draft.

Marketing Turkeys Is Explained in Bulletin

Many farmers could get more for their turkeys if they would improve the quality of the birds and adopt better dressing and packing methods, concludes a marketing specialist of the bureau of agricultural economics, on the basis of investigations in poultry packing plants and terminal markets.

It has been found that many producers expend much labor and money in an effort to raise turkeys of fine quality, and then, through improper selection, finishing and preparation of the birds for market, fail to get much of the profit they would otherwise receive.

In a bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, the specialist tells how to select turkeys for market, how to handle live turkeys, how to feed turkeys, how to kill the birds and bleed them, how to pick turkeys and clean the carcasses, how to wrap the heads, sew torn skin and remove the crops. Hauling to market, grading, weighing, packing, loading and shipping are also covered in this bulletin, entitled, "Dressing and Packing Turkeys for Market."

In "a final word," he says: "It is to the interest of the producer, packer and retailer to see that the customer is satisfied with her purchase, so that she not only will continue to use turkey as the center of the holiday dinners, but will buy one occasionally at other times."

Separate Sexes Early

Pullets will develop with greater uniformity if separated from the cockerels when they are eight to twelve weeks of age. The males are domineering and tend to claim the feed hopper space that has been allotted to the females. Furthermore it is good economy to sell the males before they become staggys.

Oyster Shell Feeding

The theory that oyster shell feeding causes the hens to drink too much water and therefore causing watery whites is without foundation. "Watery whites" do not contain any more water or less solids than the regular quality eggs. If hens have fresh water in front of them at all times they will not drink too much. The oyster shell merely helps to give the proper amount of mineral needed for the shells, says a poultry department correspondent in the Boston Herald.

Grow Early Plants

Sowing seed early in greenhouses and hotbeds is essential in growing early vegetable plants.

Supply Seed Oats

A shortage of good seed oats faces Pennsylvania farmers unless those who had good clean crops last year come to the rescue. Thousands of acres of the three highest yielding varieties, Cornelian, Keystone and Patterson, were grown last year but primarily for feed. Appeals are being made to these growers to make these oats available for seed and buy other feed with the returns.

Cross-Pollinate Apples

Boquets of apple blossoms placed in trees of different varieties assist in proper pollination and an improved set of fruit. Blossoms of Grimes Golden, Delicious, Golden Delicious, and Jonathan have shown up favorably in York Imperial trees.

THE BEST OF SAINTS

ST. VALENTINE rightly shares honors with February's other two famous statesmen, Washington and Lincoln. Is he not the greatest of diplomats? Since the Middle Ages, he has successfully negotiated treaties between the shyest of sweethearts. He has helped cement many a pact of friendship and renewed many an entente cordiale. With red paper hearts and lace-edged messages ornamented with doves and roses, this genial Ambassador of Love speaks all languages and receives a royal welcome wherever he goes.

St. Valentine's Day used to be the occasion for almost as much present-giving as Christmas. Gloves, ribbons, silk stockings and garters were the customary gifts. Children used to rise before dawn in order to "catch a grow-up" before sun-up and say, "Good mornin' to you, Valentine! First its yours and then its mine. So please give me a valentine."

After sunrise, the charm was not so likely to work.

Glimpses of the Future
The Fourteenth of February, being the heart's day, offered an opportunity to a girl to see her future husband. The first person she saw in the morning if he were neither kith nor kin, married nor an inmate of the house, would prove to be the man she married. We can imagine that some blushing maidens were not too demure to lay plans for making certain of meeting the right person!

There were also more elaborate ways of securing this important peep into the future. A girl might pick five bay leaves and pin them to her pillow—one at each corner and one at the middle. Then, as she went to bed, she took a hard-boiled egg, removed the yolk, and filled the hollow with salt. She sat up in bed and ate the egg, shell and all; then spent the night without speaking to anyone or drinking anything at all. If she lay on her back as she slept, she would undoubtedly dream of her bridegroom. But the charm would be broken if she mentioned the dream, even to her dearest friend, before ten days had passed.

Slightly less complicated is the making of a St. Valentine's Wish. To observe this old ritual, write your wish very small on a thin piece of paper. Roll it in a little piece of clay. Fill a bowl full of water and cast in your wish. If the paper frees itself and comes to the surface, St. Valentine has read your wish and will take immediate steps to grant it. You might add this bit of magic to the list of games for your Valentine party. And don't forget the sentimental fun of finding "supper partners" by matching "broken" hearts and valentine verses.

A Valentine Supper
And, speaking of supper partners, a very important part of any St. Valentine's Day entertainment is, the food that you serve. These entertainments are best in the evening when the men can be formal—in fact, the more informal the better—so here is a suggestion for a St. Valentine supper:

Chicken and Ham Shortcake
Cranberry Jelly Cut in Heart Shapes
Grapefruit Cream Sherbet with Cherry Garnish
Cocoanut Kisses
Coffee
Fairy Gingerbread

Chicken and Ham Shortcake: Make a white sauce of two tablespoons butter, one and one-half cups milk and two 6-ounce cans evaporated milk. Add one slightly-beaten egg yolk. Add the contents of a 12-ounce can of diced chicken, one cup diced cold boiled ham and two tablespoons cooking sherry, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve between and on top of split hot buttered baking powder biscuits. Serves eight.

Grapefruit Cream Sherbet: Soften one tablespoon gelatin in two tablespoons cold water, and dissolve in the boiling grapefruit juice from a No. 2 can. Add one and one-third cups sugar, dissolve and cool. Add three tablespoons lemon juice and one well-beaten egg. Pour the cold fruit mixture slowly into one cup cream, and freeze at once in refrigerator trays or in ice-cream freezer. Stir often, if in trays. Serve garnished with chopped cherries. Serves eight.
