WHEN THE COLUMBIA BRIDGE WAS BURNED

The War Between The States Reached The Banks of the Sus. quehanna River

As two generations and more have passed since the battle of Gettysburg and as many people around here hardly realize how nearly the Civil War reached Mt. Joy, a few lines penned by some one who lived here at the time may not be amiss, especially as not many are left who recollect things that happened then.

By M. M. Leib In July 1863 I was a very small Mount, Joy boy, but I was old enough to attend school in the fall following. The confederate General Robert E. Lee was then threatening York. Harrisburg, Lancaster and Philadelphia and had reached Pennsylvania There was great agitation in this region then and there was talk at our house about our neighbors hiding things so that if the rebels neighborhood these things would not be found. There was a story going around about a farmer near Drytown burying gold in a field and then plowing over it. Horses and cattle were being taken to the Conewago hills where they were to be kept for the time being.

nties preliminary bees are being held Saturday, March 17, with county winners to be chosen Saturday, March Rules and regulations for conducting county eliminations are left entirely in the hands of county superintendents. Rules that will be followed in the State championship "spell-down" have been announced by Dr. James N. Rule. Superintendent of Public Instruction. The word list to be used in the final be will be prepared from the metropolitan Sunday newspapers after all county eliminations have been held. There are indications that competition will be so keen that it may become necessary to supplement such a list with a special group of words known to old-time spelling bee enthusiasts as 'jaw breakers.' Participants in the final bee will be arranged alphabetically by counties which they represent. The speller will be expected to pronounce the word before he attempts to spell it. Correction of spelling will not be permitted after a word has been completed. The mis-spelled word will not be given to the next in order. The pronouncer will be the judge of the correct spelling, subject to an appeal to the judges. Four judges will be selected three of whom shall be acting at all times. If a word admits of two spellings, these shall be determined by standard dic-
