

You Can Depend On The Man Who Advertises

NINE times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only—but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell it if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

A customer ask a clerk in Dan Brubaker's store this question: "What is cold boiled ham?" And the clerk (I won't tell you which one) replied: "Oh, that's ham boiled in COLD water."

I ask a young lady from Rheems if she would marry a man who lied to her and she answered: "You don't think I want to be an old maid, do you?"

Seniors please take note. A cut a day keeps Commencement away.

Saturday night Charley Eby's girl said: "It's time for you to go, Charley." And Charley replied: "Aw, let's play I'm a little early for my date tomorrow night."

That same night my girl had a new dress on and she said: "Don't you think this full dress is a perfect FIT? And I very erringly answered: Yes, it is almost a convulsion..... Now, I don't have my girl anymore."

Took a trip on one of the first boat excursions of the year and I heard a lady on the boat say to the captain: Oh, captain, I'm getting so seasick I don't know what to do. The captain said: Don't worry, ma'am; you'll do it.

Here's a mother-in-law yarn that to me "takes the cake."

A fellow from Elizabethtown was out fishing with his mother-in-law one day when the boat capsized. The fellow swam safely ashore, but his mother-in-law was drowned. They were unable to recover the body, so he left his address.

Several days later he got a hurried telephone call.

Say, mister, we got the body, but it's all covered with lobsters.

That's all right, replied the son-in-law. Keep the lobsters and reset the bait.

While in Philadelphia last week I met a business man that I knew, downtown about six o'clock. I said: Why do you rise so early in the morning? And he answered: I have to get downtown early in order to find a parking place for my car.

But, I asked, don't you then have a great deal of time hanging on your hands until business hours? And he replied: Oh, after I find a parking space, I take the street car home and have breakfast...I'm afraid I'd never get accustomed to these city ways.

Two housewives were conversing and the one said: Your housemaid seems very quiet! And the other replied: She doesn't even disturb the dust.

Some time last summer Joe Heisley, one of our local plumbers, went to a doctor's for some advice. The doctor told him a few things to do and asked him to return in about a year. On Monday Joe went to the doctor and the physician asked: Did you relax and take your mind off your work at the movies last year as I suggested? Joe answered: I couldn't. They had the slow motion scenes on. The doctor said: What of it? And Joe replied: Well, I'm a plumber and my works all slow motion.

An appropriate sign for an automobile junk heap: Rust in Peace!

Last night a fellow walked up to Red Metzler and said: Here's the two-bits I owe you, Red. I wanta feel like those cross-words puzzles. Red asked: How's that? And the fellow replied: Aw, all squared up.

A clay pipe has been found to be the handiest for all-round use. One convenient feature is that when you drop it, you never have to pick it up.

A little boy on Barbara street was asked by a playmate where he had been and the little fellow replied: Watching the fish bowling. His playmate asked: Whatya mean — fish bowling? And the small chap answered: Didn't ya ever see a fishbowl?

HEALTH TALK

WRITTEN BY DR. THEODORE B APPEL, SECRETARY OF HEALTH

"The choice of a physician is frequently anything else but a deliberate one. The result is that some persons employ a professional man whose standing and ability are open to criticism. This applies particularly to the so-called quack type of the practitioner. He is a horn-blower and frequently claims all sorts of the superiorities which the more modest and decidedly more effective brethren allegedly lack," states Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health.

"Responsible physicians do not claim they possess cure-all remedies. Neither do they state that they are originators of methods or treatments unknown to the healing art generally. And most assuredly they do not demand money in advance for a "sure cure." Therefore, it can almost certainly be stated that practitioners who make such claims are in business for their own rather than for their patients' health. The main aim apparently is to get as much money as they can from those sufficiently gullible to surrender it. This type of medical man should be avoided.

"Once having disposed of frauds, the real question is how to make a good choice among the large number of physicians still left to select from in the medium sized locality or the larger one.

"While no definite rule can be laid down, it generally can be said that the vast majority hold membership in their local Medical Society and in other ways indicate their professional worth to the community. After all, good professional performance is its best advertisement.

"One should give as much consideration to the choice of a physician as he would give were he choosing the services of an architect, an attorney or any other type of highly professional man. To permit other than professional consideration to enter into the proposition certainly is not applying the judgment which a matter of this kind justifies.

"Health and disease are serious subjects. And one's advisor on the matters should be a man of good standing among his brother physicians with a creditable record of achievement behind him."

"When the lining of the abdomen cavity, with or without some of the abdominal contents, protrudes thru the abdominal wall, the result is hernia commonly known as rupture. It is not an infrequent condition, though it occurs oftener in men than in women," states Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health.

"Rupture most frequently occurs in the groin, at the naval, or through a scar resulting from an abdominal surgical operation. Back of all ruptures is weakness in the abdominal wall. Such weakness may exist at birth or develop any time during the life of the individual. Undue strain or heavy work are predisposing rupture causes.

"Treatment may be palliative. This involves the wearing of a surgical device to prevent the escape of abdominal contents through the opening. Curative treatment calls for surgical interference. The physician and the surgeon are the only persons to be relied upon for a decision as to the procedure to be invoked.

"So far as the surgical operation is concerned it is not attended by any unusual danger. In the vast majority of cases, this operation if performed skillfully, results in a complete and lasting cure.

"If, because of circumstances, the use of a truss is either temporarily or permanently advised, it is suggested that the patient should obtain it only from the surgical supply house recommended by the professional man in charge of the case. This fact is emphasized because a number of such devices that are otherwise marketed are ineffective; some of them are definitely harmful.

A lady from Florin said: My husband went to church this morning. And the neighbor lady replied: My husband's Sunday morning paper did not come, either.

Will Rogers says that he can't see any excuse for fighting any more. We presume this means that Bill is one of those married men who come home early every evening.

When the Reds took charge of Russia they had a lot of trouble with the kulaks, or "wealthy" farmers. Well, if they finally take control of the United States they won't need to worry about that. There are very few "kulaks" left here, even now.

I told a certain post office hound that I saw him Saturday night and he was awfully drunk. He said: Why, I only had one glass. And I remarked: One glass! Impossible! He said: No, they kept filling it all the time.
