

400 "Settlers" From West Go East; Provide Minor Boom In Jersey City

Jersey City, N. J. — There's a minor boom on in Jersey City. Reversing the advice of Horace Greeley, some 400 new "settlers" are arriving from the West to make their homes here and in nearby towns.

In one of the most important business migrations of recent years, the headquarters of Colgate-Palmolive-Pest Company are being shifted from Chicago to this city, and a series of caravans are bringing the new arrivals.

For the Colgate element of the giant soap concern it is a homecoming. Colgate headquarters, until 1928 — when the merger was completed — were in Jersey City, under the big clock which is famous around the world. S. Bayard Colgate, president of the company, is, himself, moving back to his ancestral home, Seven Oaks, in Orange. He is of the fourth generation in direct descent from the founder of the firm.

It was in 1806 that William Colgate "set himself up in business" in a little shop in Dutch Street, New York City. Manhattan was a village in those days, and the men and women whose names are now history daily passed the store. In 1847 the plant outgrew its quarters and was moved to the New Jersey waterfront, and it continued to

5000 Lives Stolen

"The individual and the family are robbed by tuberculosis. It stole last year the lives of about 5,000 Pennsylvanians."

This statement was made by Dr. C. Howard Marcy, Pittsburgh, president of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society, in announcing a health education campaign conducted this spring by the Pennsylvanians.

No matter how much the budget is cut, children must not suffer. This little boy is being protected against tuberculosis by having a tuberculin test.

vania Tuberculosis Society and its affiliated organizations. This effort, part of a nation-wide campaign, has as its slogan "Tuberculosis Robs You—Public Health Protects You."

"Tuberculosis is a menace as long as a single case exists, because tuberculosis is a communicable disease and is passed on from person to person," continued Dr. Marcy. "Infection cannot be controlled by individuals alone. Public measures must be added to private steps to safeguard the milk and water supply. Likewise, the discovery of the insidious disease—tuberculosis—when it can still be overcome calls for the skill of the physician. His great modern aids are the tuberculin test and the x-ray."

"Our public health authorities and voluntary health agencies during the past four years have fought disease with resourcefulness despite drastic cuts in budgets and workers. Now the tuberculosis societies are directing a renewed effort to maintain necessary public health services under difficult conditions which encourage the development of disease."

WHAT the world's champion farmer is Herman Trelle, who is shown above examining wheat on his farm at Wembley in the Peace River district of Alberta? He was born in Idaho, educated to be a civil engineer and became a farmer by accident. He has won the world's wheat championship three times; the world's oats championship twice, and the championship for field peas once. All of these awards were won at the international show in Chicago in competition with the best farmers in the United States and Canada.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

WHEN asparagus, strawberries and rhubarb come to town we know that spring is just around the corner. All three are here and moderately priced. Fish are much more plentiful due to better weather conditions. This is good news as Lent is but half gone.

The macaroni family is a nourishing and dependable ingredient of hearty and inexpensive dishes. It cooks in a short time and combines with practically every other food and so helps to use up left-overs.

Beef offers excellent value for your money at present. Veal and lamb are more attractively priced than they have been the past few weeks. Pork and hams are reasonable.

The Quaker Maid suggests the following dinner menus:

Low Cost Dinner
Roast Shoulder of Pork
Mashed Potatoes New Cabbage
Bread and Butter
Apple Pie
Milk

Tea or Coffee

Medium Cost Dinner
Beef a la Mode New Potatoes
Buttered Onions
Bread and Butter
Fruit Cup Orange Cake
Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner
Celery Hearts
Roast Beef Browned Potatoes
New Asparagus
Grapefruit Salad French Dressing
Rolls and Butter
Strawberry Bavarian
Coffee Milk
