

You Can Depend On The Man Who Advertises

NINE times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only—but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell it if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.

OWL LAFFS

BY A WISE OWL

Its pretty tough when a certain chap here fools his kids the way he does. He has a boy who is nearly thirteen, who just learned that the gas meter is not a bank.

A young fellow at Florin made the wise crack that he is the idol of the family. He's right, too. I know he has been idle at least four years.
Well, really, this particular guy has been out of work so long his tape worm died.

Believe you me—every husband has but one wife and the ice man has the pick.

Met a chap up at "Chet's" recently who wanted to be so blamed refined that he ate a banana sideways, thinking it was an ear of corn.

Now I know why Danny Moore, down at Drytown, don't play the accordion any more—he says it pinches him.

I just heard of a section in which there are no cemeteries—the dead walk around.

The other day a fellow who's feet resemble box cars, went to the Lincoln Shoe Repair for a shine. Joe said: "Close the door, I've got a day's work here."

Edgar Hagenberger told me he went to a certain store and just because they didn't have the change for a half dollar after he bought a tie, he was compelled to take nine more.

In front of the postoffice Saturday night. One High School girl to another. "Did you take a bath?" "Why, was there one missing?"

I asked Clyde Eshleman if he files his nails and he replied: "No, I throw them away."

A fellow here went to an auto graveyard and bought a car and on his way home he said he had to put it into second to cross the trolley tracks.

I fear the only way they will ever catch that man Dillinger is if a pig squeals.

A fellow on East Main street said he was born in a hospital. A dumb bell asked him if he was sick and he said: "No, I just wanted to be near my mother."

Up at the Peris Mfg. Co. at Florin Monday a man was shell shocked. He fell over a bag of peanuts.

A preacher on looking up from the sermon he was reading was horrified to see his young son in the gallery pelting the congregation below with chestnuts. Before he could get out a word of reproof, his young hopeful cried out: "You 'tend to your preachin', daddy; I'll keep 'em awake."

I was at a party last night and it was one of these ritzy ones where you have to present your card and be announced. Well, just as I was going in a gentleman with his family said to the butler: "Please announce Mr. and Mrs. Dollar and daughters." The butler went into the hostess and in a loud voice called: "Three bucks."

At a newly married couple's home on Monday night the husband was seated at the supper table when he said to his wife: "Darling, these buns are only half done." And his wife replied: "I know it, dear. That's as far as I got baking them by radio when an S.O.S. came in."

Just then the percolator fell over and strained it's coffee.

A lady from out at the Back Run was riding on a street car at Lancaster and was approaching her destination. She went up to the Conductor and said: "Which end do I get off at?" The conductor answered: "Makes no difference Ma'm both ends stop."

A small boy went down to the Cut Rate to buy the Sunday paper. Laying his money on the counter he discovered

HEALTH TALK

WRITTEN BY DR. THEODORE B APPEL, SECRETARY OF HEALTH

Soft living has created a very definite tendency, especially among the young people, to slouch and slump. Relaxation, which is overworked in nearly all departments of life, is noticeable in this physical aspect. Consequently, the many physicians are reporting rounded shoulders and the weak abdominal walls with sometimes an association of nervous disturbances. Apparently the average person is not sufficiently informed on the detrimental possibilities of the habitually bad posture, states Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of the Health.

Faulty habits of walking, standing, and sitting very easily can disturb the normal relation of organs, as well as the proper circulation of the blood. In extreme cases misplacement or falling of the abdominal and pelvic organs, and even of the stomach, can directly result from this type of neglect. Barring an actual disease that interferes with the muscular or bony bodily structures thus preventing the normal support, laziness and indifference are the only reasons for bad posture.

The advantage, both physical and mental, derived from a snappy carriage is well known in military circles. In fact, if one be observant he will note that the majority of today's successful men and women carry themselves with a measure of distinction. Mental agility, resourcefulness and stamina somehow just naturally carry with them the physical alertness and a soldierly set up.

However, after years of poor posture, it is a real problem to correct it. Mental attitude will play a large part in remedying the situation, as indeed has been the case in developing wrong carriage in the first instance. This will be no mean hurdle to overcome. A very definite amount of concentration will be necessary if results are to be permanently achieved.

Those who are young or middle aged could with much profit join a gymnasium class and thus receive the benefits of instruction in exercises recommended for the strengthening of the abdominal muscles and for restoring the organs to normal position. The family physician should be consulted in this connection and having gymnasium facilities can advise on setting up and muscle correcting home exercises.

But the point to be emphasized is that academic information on the subject and disciplining the mind to apply such knowledge are two very different matters and the latter demands a real and prolonged effort.

Good posture is a physical, social and business asset. But its real value lies in the physical and mental reactions to the subject who achieves it. In short, from all the angles most decidedly it does not pay to be a slouch.

Officer: Here, man, I have caught you stealing an auto.

Thief: It was standing in front of this cemetery and I thought the owner was dead.

John Miller says he's too tender hearted to be an electrician he could never kil-o-watt.

Sunday night Joe Detweiler's girl said: "Oh Joe, I adore that funny little step of yours. Where did you pick it up?" Joe said: "Funny nothing, my suspenders are busted."

Two girls from Mount Joy street were out on a double date Saturday night. Sunday morning they met and were discussing their date when the one said: "Gee, but that date last night was fresh." "Why didn't you slap his face?" Her girl friend asked. "I did," she replied, "and take my advice, never slap a guy when he's chewing tobacco."

A young mother went into Tyndal's drug store and asked for some sterilized ink for her baby. "Annie" finally learned that it was Stearate of Zinc and not sterilized ink that the mother wanted.

A man from Newtown tried to shave himself with a razor his wife had used to sharpen a pencil and after cutting his neck numerous times he called to his wife: "Bring me a glass of water I want to see if my throat leaks."

Jessie, queen ostrich at the London zoo, died rather suddenly one day, and when they tried to find out what had caused poor Jessie's death they found she had not been sticking to a strictly usual ostrich diet. Her stomach was found to be rather hard and lumpy, a condition which was readily explained when it was opened, for there Jessie had concealed: Three handkerchiefs, pair of gloves, four pennies, a half-crown, 13 nails, a lead pencil, five screws, two staples, six washers, four yards of string and three buttons. Of course, this may not have brought on Jessie's death, but no doubt it had something to do with it.
