"Music by Telegraph" Sent From Many Cities As Unusual Feature of A Century of Progress

From the Hall of Science tower, above, of the Century of Progress, Chicago, the J. C. Deagan carillon nightly plays "Music by Telegraph." Unique as a World's Fair feature, "Music by Telegraph" is the first attraction which it is not necessary to witness at the Fair alone but which will be demonstrated in approximately 150 cities in the United States during the course of A Century of Progress. It marks the first attempt to telegraph music.

EACH World's Fair is usually remembered by one outstanding attraction, and this year's big feature, instead of a fan dancer, will be the unusual scientific demonstration: "Music by Telegraph." Unique as a World's Fair feature, "Music by Telegraph" is the first attraction which it is not necessary to witness at the Fair alone but which will be demonstrated in approximately 150 cities in the United States during the course of A Century of Progress. It marks the first attempt to telegraph music. A musician seated before a telegraph typewriter in any Western Union office in the country now may "play" the famous Deagan carillon, the official World's Fair chimes in the tower of the Hall of Science in Chicago. This remarkable feat was made possible by Western Union engineers who wished to demonstrate that it is not only possible to wire written communications and money, but also to telegraph music. A selecting device, known as the "Telemusician," is attached to the carillon at Chicago. The Telemusician is operated by electrical impulses travelling to it over the telegraph line. At the sending end, a midget two-octave piano keyboard is fastened directly to the keys of an ordinary telegraph typewriter. Thus as the musician presses a key on the midget piano, a telegraph signal is transmitted which causes the big carillon at Chicago to play the corresponding chime.

Twice a night a famous musician, in one of the 150 cities selected to originate programs, plays two brief concerts which are transmitted by the Telemusician to Chicago. Early in the evening he plays a composition which is recorded not only audibly on the chimes at Chicago but also visually on the Musical Stenographer—a large illuminated board which permits the spectator to see the various notes which are illuminated on the scale as each is received from the distant city. For his second performance the musician in the distant city repeats his performance as the nightly "sign-off" feature of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Cockatillo, Noisy Bird, Is Native of Australia
The cockatillo, whimsically described by one authority on cage birds as a small edition of the cockatoo, is a most distinguished appearing bird, says a writer in the Detroit News.

Measuring between 10 and 11 inches in length this immigrant from Australia is clothed almost entirely in gray, having a pearly gray breast and darker gray back and wings. Yellow cheek patches, each with its center of crimson, lend a touch of color to the cockatillo's attire; while its dignity is greatly heightened by a pearl gray crest, shading to yellow at the base. These are the colorings of the male, but the female is practically the same in appearance, though the color touches are not so bright. They are noisy. Their love-call has a bell-like and musical quality, but is uttered very often and sometimes grows too piercing for the enjoyment of the listener. Some of them learn to talk a little, though such cases are rare.

Although the native home of the cockatillo is in Australia, most of those found in this country have been bred here, for there is in effect in Australia a law which forbids the exporting of native birds. However, they are said to show a tendency to breed often in captivity than in their native state. The American bred birds are harder, in the opinion of many authorities, than imported ones.

Emu, National Bird
In the old colonial days, immense flocks of emus, the national bird of Australia, roamed over the inland plains. Although still to be found in large numbers in some districts, they have become rare in places where formerly they abounded. The emu is one of the most interesting inhabitants of Wilson's Promontory National park, in the State of Victoria. Here they are "tame wild birds," says Nature Magazine. The emu figures in the Australian national coat of arms, and is to be found on all Australian stamps, while the national animal, the kangaroo, decorates another corner of the postage.

Pennsylvania Group Are Avid Fair Visitors

A happy group of visitors to the new World's Fair in Chicago go after their first day on the Exposition grounds. These people from York and York county, Pennsylvania, under the chaperonage of Glenn E. Bailey and J. W. Barwick, numbers 153, and include 75 school children and 60 teachers. They are giving much of their attention to the educational features offered in such abundance at this year's Fair. Their first visits were made to all of the exhibit buildings, the Field Museum of Natural History, the Adler Planetarium, the Larna temple, the Colonial Village, and the replica of old Fort Dearborn. While in Chicago the party stayed at Judson Court, on the campus of the University of Chicago.

Black Marble Under Chalk
In the chalk mine of Nagyvisnyo, near Miskolc, rich layers of black marble are found under the chalk, writes the Budapest correspondent of the London Sunday Observer. According to expert reports, this marble is equal in quality to the famous black marble of Belgium. The mountain ranges which surround the mine also contain quantities of black marble streaked with white. This stone has in the past been employed by the villagers for paving the highways, so the villages of Nagyvisnyo, Uraj and Susa bear the unusual distinction of being approached by marble roads.
Before Bank of England
Merchants of London placed their gold, which was the unit of exchange, in the Tower of London for safe keeping. Charles I. 1640, took possession of the tower with 200,000 pounds of gold, which he appropriated. The merchants then placed their money with the goldsmiths and the notes given in exchange were passed from hand to hand, originating the system of checking. The goldsmiths became too powerful as the holders of the gold of the country and were suppressed, principally by the chartering of the Bank of England, 1694.

Napoleon's Simplon Road

Great Engineering Feat
Napoleon invaded Italy by crossing over the St. Bernard mountain. When he had ended the campaign by destroying the Italian army at the battle of Marengo and had returned to France, he determined to emphasize and render permanent his success by constructing a great military road into Italy.

The execution of the work was entrusted to M. Ceard, one of the foremost engineers of the day. It was begun on the Italian side in 1800 and on the Swiss side in 1801, and was finished in six years.

The road was made over a shoulder of the Simplon mountain, from Byrieg in Valais to Domo d'Ossolo, in the north part of Piedmont, Italy. The summit of the mountain over which it passed was 6,592 feet above sea level. The road was from 25 to 30 feet broad, and had nowhere throughout its extent a slope of greater than one foot in thirteen. It was carried across 611 bridges, over numerous galleries cut out of the solid rock or built of masonry, and through a number of tunnels. The road was one of the masterpieces of the engineering of that day, and cost about $3,500,000, half of which was borne by France and the remainder by Switzerland.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

My Favorite Recipes

Frances Lee Barton says:

HERE is a tasty, eye-tempting change from the summer dish of sliced tomatoes—Cheese Salad in Tomato Cups. Serve it for supper some hot night with sliced cold meat or for a bridge luncheon.

Cheese Salad in Tomato Cups
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin; 1 1/2 cups warm water; 2 teaspoons vinegar; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese; 1/4 cup mayonnaise; 6 medium-sized tomatoes, peeled.
Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add vinegar and salt. Chill. Blend cheese with mayonnaise. When cheese mixture is thickened, add to gelatin mixture gradually, stirring well. Turn into shallow pan, in 1/2-inch layer. Chill until firm.
Cut slice from stem end of each tomato. Remove part of pulp. Sprinkle inside of tomatoes with salt and turn upside down to drain. When gelatin is firm, cut in 1/2-inch cubes. Fill tomatoes with gelatin mixture. Arrange on bed of lettuce or water cress. Serve with additional mayonnaise. Serves 6.
