Make Way For Lazy Days...

ON sultry summer days, porches can be eating, sleeping and living rooms. Is your porch as attractive as it might be—is it really livable 24 hours a day?

It's a wise idea to make everything on the porch as water-proof as possible. Paint, varnish, enamel and lacquer, of course, are your best allies in the constant war against weather. See that the furniture, no matter what its material, is thoroughly protected with good quality, water-resisting paint. Give the porch as many couches as space permits—for the charm of a summer porch is its invitation to complete laziness.

Don't forget that porch floors are forced to take the hardest kind of punishment, and should be protected once a year with porch-deck paint. Water-proof fabric covers will guard your couches. Colorfully painted wood boxes, with lids, make excellent tables and serve as pillow-containers in case of a sudden shower.

Dewey Destroyed Spanish Fleet Without Losing Man
George Dewey was born at Montpelier, Vt.; graduated from the Naval academy in 1878, and commissioned lieutenant in April, 1881. During the Civil war he served on the steam frigate Mississippi in the Gulf and on the gunboat Albatross in the north Atlantic blockading squadron, took part in the opening of the Mississippi and capture of New Orleans by Farragut; the engagements below Donaldsonville and in the attacks on Fort Fisher. In January, 1898, he was placed in command of the Asiatic squadron, and on the outbreak of the Spanish-American war was ordered against the Spanish naval forces under Admiral Montojo.

May 1, 1898, Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet in Manila bay without the loss of a man or material injury to any of his vessels. The Spanish navy yard at Cavite then fell into his hands. When the news of his victory reached the United States he was promoted to rear-admiral and thanked by congress. He remained in Manila bay, blockading the port and vicinity until the arrival of American troops; then, in co-operation with General Merritt, he captured the city and adjacent fortifications. He retained command of naval forces in Philippine waters until 1899, during which time he served as a member of the first Philippine commission (1899). In March, 1899, he was made admiral of the navy, the highest rank held by any American naval officer. On his arrival in the United States he was received with great honor, both at New York and at Washington. From March 29, 1900, to the time of his death, January 10, 1917, he was president of the general board of the navy.
