The Face on the Bathroom Wall...

WHAT'S this? Cold blue shadows under the eyes, a pallid green light on the skin, hollows in these firm cheeks? Are the colors on your bathroom walls telling lies about you to the bathroom mirror? It's a dangerous way to start the day. The cold colors (harsh grays, icy blues, yellowish greens) have a way of reflecting an unnatural, unflattering tint to the skin. Such colors are apt to curdle your whole disposition before you're fully awake and aware.

Try painting the bathroom walls and ceiling in a warm and cheerful color—pinkish cream, a heartening yellow, a rosy beige or a creamy coral—any of the hundreds of light, sunny tints that flatter your complexion and assure your mirror that you're beginning the day "in the pink."

Gas paints, made especially for hard-worn, easily-cleaned bathroom walls, come in a wide variety of luscious tints. If you can't find the exact hue you have in mind—your painter will help you to mix it. A cheerful tone on your face is as important to your daily disposition as a morning shower.

Reach for a color card before you begin another day with the blues.
