Pupils Given Questionnaire
SCHOOLS ARE COMPILING RECORDS OF THE PUPILS WHICH AIDS IN SHOWING THE INDIVIDUAL NEEDS, INTERESTS AND CAPACITIES

During the past few days, the pupils of our grade and high schools have been handed papers to be filled out by their parents or guardians. The teachers have tried to explain that the answers to the questions were for publication, but for personal records of the pupil to be compiled in a condensed form, easily obtained by the instructors on a very short notice.

There has been quite a bit of interest aroused, both for and against such information being asked.

In Bulletin 81, 1933 issue, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Department of Public Instruction, it explains what the Cumulative Pupil Personal Records, Elementary and Secondary Schools is.

It aids in showing the individual needs, interests and capacities and adjusts the individual instructional program accordingly. It thus helps the teachers to help the pupils to help themselves.

It is a valuable assistant to printers. (Turn to page 8)

WAS CHARGED WITH INVOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER FOR KILLING YOUNG MAN - WAS DRIVING CAR WHILE INTOXICATED

C. Lloyd Nissly, thirty-six, Florin, was sentenced to a year in the Lancaster county prison and ordered to pay a $500 fine and the costs when he pleaded guilty late Thursday before Judge Oliver S. Schaeffer, in the Lancaster County Court on a charge of involuntary manslaughter. Nissley was arrested August 16 after police said he had driven off after hitting three boys walking along the highway near Silver Springs. One of the youths, Roy Stauffer, Fredericksburg, Lebanon County, died of his injuries.

After Nissly had been sentenced on the involuntary manslaughter charge, District Attorney Paul A. Mueller announced he would not press two other charges lodged against Nissly those of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated and failing to stop and render assistance after an accident.

The defendant, the district attorney stated, lost his license in 1923 after being charged with drunken driving, although Nissley corrected Mueller, saying the charge was reckless driving. When arrested, Mueller said Nissly had told Patrolman Groff that the boys had jumped in front of his machine.

Asking mercy from the court for his client, Hosterman stated Nissly, since the accident, had voluntarily surrendered his driving license and had not driven since that time. He said Nissly was suffering from nervous exhaustion and other illness ever since the night he was arrested. Nissly had planned to be married at Christmas. Hosterman stated but plans for the wedding had been postponed. The attorney admitted that his client had a "known weakness for liquor."

Told that Nissly was the son of the late Eli Nissly, prominent tobacco man of Florin. Judge Schaeffer said the crime was all the more serious since the defendant came from a good family.
