

CAMERAGRAPHS

DOMINANT IN A STRANGE PROFESSION: Calman Levine, left, chief whiskey blender for Seagrams, one of the world's largest distillers, whose tools are his super-sensitive palate and sense of smell, is the highest-paid whiskey blender in the world. Mr. Levine hails from Scotland, where he attained eminence in his profession at the age of seventeen. He has now become an American citizen, and is producing rye and bourbon blends with a basic stock of five-year old whiskeys drawn from the largest liquor treasury in the world. His strange talent enables him to foretell the taste and bouquet of liquors he blends five, ten and fifteen years ahead. He never drinks a drop while blending.

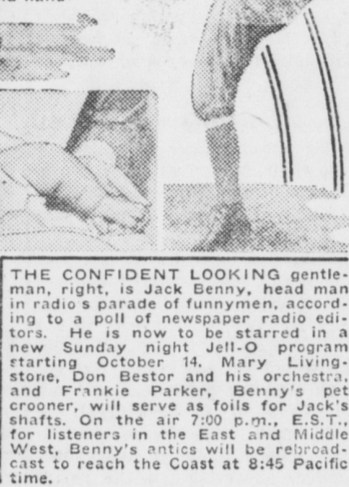

THE BEGINNING AND THE END: The close of the 1934 baseball season will mark the passing of the most colorful player of the game, Babe Ruth, left, who next year will probably be manager of the New York Yankees. A left-hander, Frank Littlefield, left, Harvard, showing his high, wide and handsome.

DIXIE DUNBAR, whose twinkling eyes are dancing their way to fame in the current Broadway hit, "Life Begins At 40," smartly clad for fall in a casual leather jacket, tweed skirt and Seibly arch-preserver shoes, which feature two shades of leather in a smartly modified high-throated, close-fitting combination. Miss Dunbar says that her feet are her fortune. "I insure them," she smiled, "not by taking out a million dollar policy, but by wearing correct shoes."

BEGINNING LIFE IN A BIG WEIGH: Born tipping the scales at 14 pounds and 10 ounces this youngster shows fair promise of being a professional strong man, or woman?

THE CONFIDENT LOOKING gentleman, right, is Jack Benny, head man in radio's parade of funny men, according to a poll of newspaper radio editors. He is now to be starred in a new Sunday night Jell-O program starting October 14. Mary Livingstone, Don Bestor and his orchestra, and Frankie Parker, Benny's pet crooner, will serve as foils for Jack's shenanigans. On the air 7:00 p.m., E.S.T., for listeners in the East and Middle West. Benny's antics will be broadcast to reach the Coast at 8:45 Pacific time.

NEWS OF GENERAL INTEREST AS IT OCCURRED IN THAT BUSY VILLAGE WEST OF HERE

Mrs. Al Fike is on the sick list. The Ladies' Missionary Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Gemberling. Don't forget the regular weekly card parties being held at Kinsey's Restaurant every Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Campbell called on Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lindemuth at Milton Grove on Sunday evening.

Mrs. Emma Raffensperger attended the shower in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Jno. F. Waser at Mount Joy on Monday evening. Saturday afternoon Elmer Schlegelmilch, of town, accidentally upset his auto at the culvert west of town. The damage was slight.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leedom and Doris Leedom attended a birthday surprise in honor of Mrs. Peter Farst at Lawn on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Luke Keefer and daughter, of Millersburg; Mr. and Mrs. John Melhorn and children, of Mount Joy, and Mr. and Mrs. Christ Melhorn, of this place were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Miller Wolgemuth.

Misses Esther Garber, Elsie Lefevre and Mrs. Lynn Gutshall were among the Gerberich-Payne Shoe Company's office force who were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tyndall at their cottage in Mount Getzeta.

Evolution of the Fourth Letter of the Alphabet

The letter D has occupied fourth position in the alphabet from earliest times, and in the modern English alphabet it retains the same place. It had in the Phoenician, Greek, and Latin, which represent the early stages of alphabetic history. The Phoenician daleth is represented by the Greek delta, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

The sound which the letter D commonly represents in English is the voiced dental stop, corresponding to the unvoiced T. It is interesting, however, that in English the letter does not represent a true dental stop, because it is pronounced by placing the tongue against the gums instead of against the front upper teeth. The pronunciation of the letter in English thus differs from the French and German pronunciation. In phonetic terminology the English pronunciation of D is called an alveolar.

In many languages the letter develops an aspirate dh, and this aspirate represents a voiced spirant, such as the initial sound in the words there and that. Another interesting fact in connection with the letter D is that in pronouncing it there is little difference between the mouth position for D and for L. The letter is pronounced by placing the tongue against the gums in exactly the position for D but the breath is allowed to escape past one or both sides of the tongue. Because of this phonetic similarity between the two letters, confusion has arisen in many languages between the letters D and L.

Skimpy Ablutions Hygiene was a strange thing in the days of Louis XVI, whose valet would pour a little perfumed alcohol on his hands by way of washing them.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD USE THE FINDER

At what is the girl pointing? ... Why? ... What of it? A good picture, but uninteresting because it tells no story and fails to explain itself. There is no question, however, about the snapshot of the hunter. It tells a complete story. Its composition is successful.

LISTEN in on any snapshotting beginner as he goes over a fresh batch of prints:
"Boy, look at that! Got that string of trout swell. But say—Bill's head's out of the picture! Now how did manage to do a crazy thing like that?"
The answer is very simple. The ad taking the picture failed to use the view-finder when he made the shot. He probably saw that the string of fish was in view, but he quite overlooked the fact that the protruding Bill was neatly decapitated. Most modern cameras have two kinds of view-finders. First, of course, is the familiar reflecting inder—the kind into which you peer from above. Properly shaded, it will give you an accurate idea of what each shot includes. Then there is the "direct" view-finder, mounted on the top or side of the camera. In using it you hold the camera at eye-level and sight through two rectangular openings. What you see, the camera will get.

With either or both of these finders there is really little reason for ailing to get what you want in a picture. Of course, there are limits, limited by the size and shape of the film and the capacity of the lens. You have to select the most interesting bits of a scene and concentrate on them.
When an artist does this, he "composes" his picture. Many volumes have been written on the subject of composition, but the whole idea may be boiled down to this: A good composition is simply pleasing arrangement of the elements of a picture, an arrangement that puts the emphasis on the most interesting feature.
A little care in using your view-finder will, almost invariably, give you a well-composed picture. For your eye will reject an arrangement that is confusing or displeasing; it will warn you that somebody's head is going to be lopped off; it will reveal whether or not the finished picture will tell a story—the story you had in mind when you unlimbered the camera.
For "telling a story" is the essence of a good picture. The Chinese have a proverb, "One picture is worth ten thousand words." But the proverb applies only to good pictures.
Many a professional photographer spends hours studying the "view-finder" of his camera before he makes a single shot. His success in business depends on his presenting vivid story-telling pictures. In our snapshotting we have no such weighty considerations. We have only ourselves and a few friends to please. But we can increase that pleasure vastly by pausing, just before we click the shutter, to check up our picture in the view-finder. If it's what we want—fire away! And when the finished pictures come back, we shall certainly not be begrudge those few seconds of concentration on the view-finder.

Ruhl-Miller
Miss Eva Ruhl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ruhl, Mount Joy, and Ezra Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Miller, Bainbridge, were married Thursday evening, at the home of Rev. Henry Lutz, near town, who performed the ceremony.

The couple was attended by Esther Longenecker, Elizabethtown, and Andrew Stoner, Bainbridge. Following the wedding they left for a trip to Kentucky. On their return a few days ago they were tendered a kitchen shower at their home in Elizabethtown, and were given a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Sunday afternoon.

Poker and Pineapple

HAWAII is the land of pineapple and poker players. It was there that good King Kalakaua learned to deal the deck with voyagers who came to his shores. And like California, Hawaii is proud of raising things bigger and better—like pineapples and poker bids. When Kalakaua raised his bid when playing with an opponent who held four aces, he was tactfully reminded that four aces beat four kings. But Kalakaua raised his regal hand. "But," said he, "Five kings beat four aces."

We don't know whether you can get better card decks in Hawaii, but we do know you can get better pineapples. So at your next poker party, serve some better pineapple dishes. Here are several for your consideration:

They're All Tested
Shrimp and Pineapple Entree: Peel eight uniform red tomatoes, cut a slice from the top and scoop out the centers. Dust inside and chill. Meanwhile marinate the contents of one 5 1/2-ounce can of shrimps and one-half cup of chopped celery in French dressing. Then combine with one cup of drained wedges of canned pineapple and season with salt and paprika. Add mayonnaise to hold them together and fill the tomato cases. This serves eight persons.

Pineapple Birdness: Drain thoroughly the slices from one No. 2 can of pineapple, and dip each slice in condensed milk so that both sides are well covered. Then coat heavily with moist cocoanut. Place on a greased pan and brown in a moderate oven. This serves eight persons.

Pineapple and Cream Cheese Salad: Dissolve one package of lemon gelatin in one cup of boiling water and add one tablespoon vinegar. Mash one package of cream cheese, add the gelatin slowly and mix until smooth. Then add one and one-half cups of crushed pineapple and chill. When beginning to set, add one-fourth cup of chopped nuts and pour into individual molds. Serve on lettuce with creamy mayonnaise. This serves six persons.

Gives $500 Bail
Paris Kopp, 20, of Masterstown, was given a hearing on the serious charges preferred by Oliver Funk of town, in behalf of his daughter, Margaret, 20, before Squire H. B. Wittie, Florin, and held in $500 bail for Lancaster Co. court.
