A Non-Suit Is Ordered

BALTIMORE MAN, HURT AT A HORSE SALE AT COLEBROOK, SUED FOR DAMAGES FOR HIS INJURIES

Judge Atlee ordered a non-suit in the case where Emanuel Sachs of Baltimore, was the plaintiff in an action to recover damages as the result of being injured by a horse.

Sachs brought suit against Elmer H. Wittmer, of Mastersville, and Jacob G. Hershey, of Manheim, to recover for a fractured leg which he claimed he suffered while attending a horse sale conducted by the two defendants at Colebrook, Lebanon county, on August 8, 1931.

Judge Atlee made his ruling on a motion of J. W. Brown and W. Hensel Brown, attorneys for the two Lancaster county men. The attorneys claimed that Sachs and his witnesses did not present evidence to show that the horse that injured Sachs was vicious and that the two defendants were negligent in handling the animal.

Sachs testified that he was employed as a salesman for a horse and mule dealer of Baltimore and attended the sale with the intention of purchasing some animals. He claimed that the defendants did not have a barrier erected between the space where the horses were exhibited and the space where the audience stood.

In addition to the plaintiff, Woodland B. Jackson, Lancaster, and Mr. Amos Shenk, farmer, of West Donegal township, were witnesses for the plaintiff.

Making Survey and Check On Our Water Consumers

MANY CONNECTIONS THRUOUT THE TOWN FROM WHICH THE BORO WAS NOT RECEIVING ANY COMPENSATION ARE DISCOVERED

For the first time since the writer has been a resident of Mount Joy (forty years, if our memory is correct) Mount Joy Borough is checking and double checking on water consumers.

When Mr. Bailey succeeded the late Jacob H. Zeller as boro secretary, there was no accurate itemized list of water renters available. Neither were the rates available.

At the September meeting of the Council it was reported that there was no record to be found anywhere giving the various water rates to the consumers in Mount Joy. At that time the editor of the Bulletin volunteered to furnish a copy of the ordinance covering the boro.

On August 1, 1892, a trifle over 42 years ago, Mount Joy Boro Council passed an ordinance fixing all the water rates to consumers. At that time the late Henry L. Stager was burgess and the late Frank G. Pennell, father of our present assistant postmistress Miss Emma Pennell was boro clerk.

These rates have been in force ever since but Council's records of the same very mysteriously disappeared. Fortunately, the writer, among many other valuable records, had a book containing all the boro ordinances, rules, regulations and by-laws of Council and the Water Works. This book was compiled by the late Henry L. Stager, Harry C. Schock and Francis M. Harry and published by authority of Council in 1892.

Referring to the ordinance there is a penalty for any plumber or individual to make any connection to the water mains anywhere at any time without a permit. The fine for the offense is $25.00.

In order to establish a permanent record, the Water Committee has Supervisor Henry Smeltzer and Geo. Halblein making a complete survey of the town. The latter is making a house to house canvass.

Already nearly a dozen bath tubs, half a dozen lawn fountains, pools, and dozens of extra spigots have been recorded for which there were no charges for the use of water from same.

When the work is completed, a perfect record of all water consumers will be on file. Hereafter any additional connections made without a permit, will cost the person or persons concerned, a fine and costs.

11 Streams Here To Be Improved

LANCASTER COUNTY ASKS RELIEF FUNDS; WILL PLANT THE GAME FISH IN THE VARIOUS STREAMS - LITTLE CHICKIES "OVERLOOKED"

Eleven Lancaster county streams are to be made habitable for game fish by improving the waterways with Relief Works Division funds according to plans announced by the Lancaster Sportsmen's Association.

Plans have been prepared and the Lancaster Co. Commissioners will make formal application to the State Emergency Relief Board for funds to pay the labor costs. Lancaster Co. will be the first in Pennsylvania to attempt a stream improvement with RWD funds. Half a dozen other counties are rushing plans for similar programs.

Completion of the plans brought a message of congratulation from the State Game Commissioners to the sportsmen's organization.

The State Emergency Relief Board will pay $6,075 in wages to men who will work on the projects. The sports men and county commissioners will pay together $1,377.41. Included in this latter amount is the cost of an expert stream surveyor who will be supplied by the Game Commission.

It will be noticed by the list of the streams mentioned that the Little Chickies creek, east of town, one of the largest in the county, was overlooked.
