Pennsylvania's State and municipal authorities were at only a slight disadvantage during December in their constant campaign against automobile thieves.

Commercial vehicle operators find State Highway Patrolmen on the job regularly, enforcing the laws regulating these types of vehicles.

OWL LAFFS

A WISE OWL

While attending the Automobile Show in Philadelphia last week I came to the conclusion, that when better cars are made, people will still mortgage their homes to buy 'em.

We learned at the show that an auto manufacturer has just completed a million dollars proving ground to give his car the acid test in staying power and endurance...

Looking at the new Pontiac we heard a lady say to her husband: "Darling, we must get a new car." "What?" shouted her husband. "When I'm still paying installments on the car I exchanged for the car I sold in part payment of the car I've got now!"

An old Tom Cat on Railroad alley, surveyed himself in the family water bucket and said: "One ear gone, one eye closed, thirteen gashes, part of the lower jaw missing, and nothing left of the whiskers but stumps. What a glorious old time I must have had last night."

The engineer couldn't blow his whistle but he didn't give a toot.

A man from Marietta tried to procure a job on the Lancaster police force. He passed the physical tests but the written examination gave him a little trouble. On one question: "A man buys an article for $12.25 and sells it for $9.75; does he gain or lose on the transaction?" After pondering over the question the Marietta gentleman finally answered: "He gains on the cents, but loses on the dollars."

The only time it pays a woman to be long-winded is when she's blowing out the candles on her birthday cake.

When ask what was worse than a giraffe with a sore throat one of our brilliant young Freshman answered: "A centipede with corns."

Saturday night "Firpy" Weaver's girl told him: "The man I marry must be tall and handsome." And Firpy retorted: "Gimme a chance, I'm still growing.... Oh, you handsome thing."

What with liquor so cheap, cider must be hard to sell.

Well, it's a comfort to know that the horses we bet on are polite, anyway they always step aside to let the other nags pass them.

I was talking to a West Main Street man when I remarked: "So you got rid of the radio in your car?" "Yes," he replied, "I couldn't listen to a broadcast in front of me and from the rear seat at the same time."

There are poor people in the Shanty town of a near by city who live in such dilapidated shacks that every time it rains, they have to go out and get in their sedans.

"Aha!" exclaimed a Florin man while standing in the middle of Main Street, "see a pin and pick it up, and all the day you'll have good luck," and as he bent over to pick it up, his hat fell in the mud, his glasses, dropped from his nose and smashed on the street, burst three suspender buttons and tore the buttonhole out of the neckband of his shirt.

A certain gentleman who lives not far from town, was attending a show (?) at Philadelphia last week when he remarked to his friends: "Isn't it funny that most of the men in the first rows are bald?" "No," answered his friend, "because most of 'em bought their tickets from a 'scalper.' No, this certain gentleman wasn't sitting in the first row—He had a 'box seat.'"

We understand there is a car in this country for every 4.3 persons. The 3 person is probably what was left of someone who got into the rumble seat.

HEALTH TALK

WRITTEN BY DR. THEODORE B APPEL, SECRETARY OF HEALTH

"In spite of the fact that America is highly conscious of personal, sanitary standards, millions of homes in the United States do not even have bathtubs. This 'Believe It or Not' fact is all the more surprising when one considers the appeals to cleanliness that have appeared for a score or more years in the advertising spreads of magazines and papers, and latterly have been heard over the radio. And while this bathtubless fact in itself does not necessarily prove that Americans are not sufficiently conscious of the great value of cleanly habits and of the habitual use of soap, in particular, it does serve to emphasize the adage that 'Cleanliness is next to Godliness,' states Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Secretary of Health.

"Together with its ordinary cleansing properties pure soap has a definite germicidal value. The action of soap as a cleanser has been very clearly explained by a well known skin specialist in these words: 'As a cleanser, soap suspension has two properties: (1) it removes oil, grease and other insoluble liquids by forming an emulsion with them and (2) it also removes minute solid particles of dirt by taking the dirt into suspension. Thus it has an emulsifying power and a capacity for adsorption of fine particles. The former property is based on the fact that the emulsion of a colloidal suspension (soap) with an immiscible liquid is a stable condition. Consequently, soap suspension when rubbed on oily or greasy goods, emulsifies the grease, converts it into droplets, surrounded by soap solution and separated from the cloth, and so permits it to be washed off. After the soap has emulsified the oil it then adsorbs the particles of dirt which are then set free.

"According to Gardiner, the effects of soap on the skin are due chiefly to the alkali, for when an alkaline solution such as that of soap comes into contact with the skin, there is induced an excessive secretion of the acid sebum and sweat and a keratolytic effect on the protective epithelium. 'As to soap's germicidal power this same authority among other things states, 'To a certain degree soaps are germicidal. Their germicidal action varies with different organisms. The germicidal activity is greatly enhanced by raising the temperature; this activity is further supplemented by any sterilizing effect brought about by the mechanical removal of bacteria.'

"However, the meat in the scientist's article is contained in the following statement: 'Soaps are potent factors in preventing the spread of disease not only on account of their germicidal action on the common organisms with the exception noted but also because no antiseptic can replace cleanliness. It is the best disinfectant for everyday life, to be supplemented, when the occasion arises, by appropriate drugs (surgical antiseptics) under the care of physicians.'

"It is thus seen that pure soap is not only a toilet and sanitary necessity but is actually a preventive against a number of infections that attack man on the skin surface. However, to get the best service from this essential sanitary factor one must use pure soap wisely, thoroughly and often."

"THE WORLD'S ALL RIGHT"

"The World's All Right" and the Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 185 is out to prove it! Jan. 24th and 25th are the dates set for the elaborate Community Show to be staged in the High School Auditorium. At special meetings held Monday afternoon at the home of the President, Mrs. John Longenecker, and Monday evening, at the home of Mrs. George Brown, plans for the production were discussed and a cast of prominent local people was selected.

This modern musical comedy with its scene laid in a radio broadcasting studio, promises to be a brilliant successor to the list of local shows already staged here, and the usual ready response to Auxiliary entertainments has already been felt in the contacts made thus far. The all-fell in the mud, his glasses, dropped from his nose and smashed on the street, burst three suspender buttons and tore the buttonhole out of the neckband of his shirt.

Auto Recovery Eighty-nine motor vehicles, valued at $30,038 were recovered by state highway patrolmen last November. Over a period of 11 months, the Patrol recovered 802 vehicles valued at $280,417, along with 381 other articles which owners valued at $12,410.
